WASHINGTON, D. C., April 5—Washington is misty and cloudy today, appropriate weather, with everybody wondering what is going to happen.

The four thousand eight hundred and eighty million dollars "prosperity bill" has finally fought its way through the House and the Senate.

That sum, almost five billion dollars, seems like a great deal of money, enough to bring back prosperity and make everybody happy, until you remember that five billions are less than fifty dollars for every inhabitant of the United States. You cannot do much with fifty dollars, at the present cost of living.

Imagine how much it would take of public money to keep this country going, if everybody decided to go on "relief."

This trip is part of a journey to White Sulphur Springs, where next week Arthur Kudner will preside over an important gathering of advertising people.

The journey is made with a swing South to Miami, where three small girls in school believe that fathers should be seen and heard, occasionally.

The latest news indicates that Chancellor Hitler is not as anxious for "war in a hurry" as was alleged.

Sir John Simon, for England, received from Hitler a written proposal, with five provisions:

First, a ten-year non-aggression treaty with Germany's neighbors, nobody to attack anybody else.

Second, a pledge to withhold economic and financial assistance from any nation starting a war.

Hitler wrote that, and, if he means it, Lloyd George is correct in his statement:

"Not this time."

The French, who have a line of steel and concrete forts along their eastern border, all the way from Switzerland north, refuse to take Hitler's protestations seriously.

They move three more army corps up to the line of forts and will hold under arms young soldiers that should be discharged this June. Nothing convinces the logical French but facts.

In addition to moving 60,000 more soldiers to the German lines, France is hurriedly connecting her steel and concrete line of fortresses, with barbed wire entanglements and trenches. Thirty thousand soldiers are digging in as you read.

The French apparently expect the same old thing over again, but they will not see it. Nations in the next war will not squat in trenches, but fly against the enemy nation's chief cities, and kill an impressive number of citizens with poison explosives and gas.

Nothing will be more lonesome than a front line trench in the next war.

The "London Advisory Protective Committee for American Investments" would reverse the Supreme Court decision setting aside gold payments. Other nations are asked to join with the "British protective committee."

Uncle Sam might give them an order on their own government for the money they think they ought to have. The amount could be deducted from debts owed to the United States, contracted when European gentlemen had their backs to the wall, and came near being beaten, in fact, fully expected to be beaten, by Germany, even with Italy, France, England, Russia united against her.

In Los Angeles, respectable ladies who started "Housewives' League" to boycott butchers and reduce the cost of living, are horrified to read that other ladies less conservative, running a "United Front" League, have been pulling customers from the shops of boycotted butchers and even tearing their hair. The head of the conservative Housewives' League is said to have exclaimed, "Gracious!" when she heard this news.

You can never tell what will happen when you begin interfering with "supply and demand."

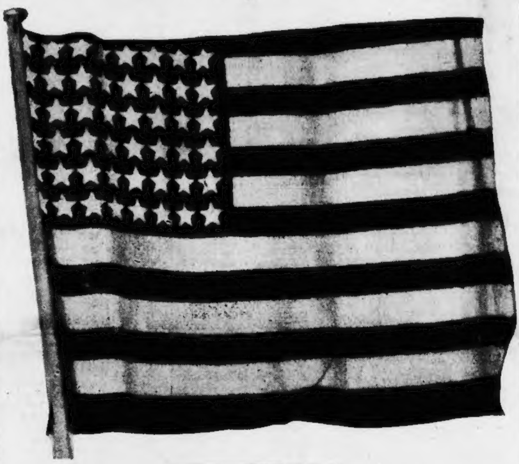
The government that has discouraged kidnaping has now taken up the bank robbing problem. J. Edgar Hoover, who directs criminal investigations for the Department of Justice, has sent out notices to the nation's 6442 banks that have deposits of more than thirty-one thousand million dollars, asking them to let him know as soon as they are robbed.

The government has fast automobiles, an adequate supply of arms, and the bank robbing industry hereafter will be dangerous.

The country has 10,000 public enemies, among them 5000 known to be bank robbers. Bank robbing is now a federal offense, and the bank robbing industry hereafter will be a dangerous one.

MOTHER FINDS LOST GIRL IN JAIL

The Flag of Peace, The Flag of Power, The Flag of Protection



PRESIDENT THEODORE ROOSEVELT, in a letter written in 1918, said that the great need of that time was first a "thorough going and absolute Americanism throughout this land."

"And," continued he, "secondarily to these needs, come the needs of beginning even now TO MAKE READY to PREPARE for the task that is to come after the war—the task of preparing so that NEVER AGAIN SHALL WAR FIND US HELPLESS."

It was the hope of President Wilson that the Great War would be a war to end wars, and to make the world safe for democracy.

Unhappily, wars are not ended, and the world has never been so unsafe for democracy as it is today.

Ambitious dictators rule in many of the great nations throughout the earth, and imitation dictators are trying to establish themselves in other nations.

ARMAMENTS throughout the world are at a peak, and the antagonisms of armed nations and ambitious dictators may at any time precipitate the world into another immense and terribly destructive conflict.

The duty of our government is to keep America out of war, and TO KEEP WAR OUT OF AMERICA.

The second part of our duty is as important as the first part.

We must keep the ravages of war out of our own land.

We must do this by minding our own business, and by having sufficient protective forces to compel other nations to mind their own business.

We must be prepared to protect our country and our people.

We must have an army and a navy and an air force to defend our people from attack.

EVERY intelligent citizen knows that we want military forces for defense, not for aggression.

We want them to preserve peace, not to make war.

And it is as much the duty of government to protect its people from the assaults of enemies from without as it is to protect them from dangers from within.

We have fire department forces not to spread fires, but to protect our people from the ravages of fire.

We have police forces to protect our people from the vicious activities of criminals.

But the disaster of fire and of crime, no matter how great, is not as great as the possible disaster of war.

The primary obligation of good government is to insure conditions of peace to its people, protection from danger and disturbance, so they may spend their lives, enjoy their liberties, and prosecute their occupations in safety and security.

THE motto of America should be: MILLIONS FOR DEFENSE BUT NOT ONE CENT FOR OPPRESSION AND AGGRESSION.

The American Flag should mean peace, power and protection wherever it waves.

Above all must it mean liberty and security for the American people in their own home land.

It must mean that to be the worthy emblem of a great nation and a great people.

But to have it mean that in actual fact and in the eyes of the world, we must "make ready" and "prepare," "so that never again shall war find us helpless."

Let peace make us prepared, and war find us protected.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

NATION JOINS IN ARMY DAY OBSERVANCE

Eighteen years ago today, the United States entered the World War.

Today, through the nation, Army Day was celebrated in observance of that momentous date in history.

From the Atlantic seaboard to the Pacific, music trumpeted to the skies; anti-aircraft guns roared and reverberated; machine gun exhibitions, sham-battles, platoon drills and radio broadcasts of patriotic nature enlivened the day.

In the New England sector civic and military leaders joined in the patriotic observance.

INSPECT CAMP

The city's official celebration will be held tomorrow afternoon before a capacity crowd at the Arena, but the blare of martial music boomed throughout New England today.

The 13th Infantry of Fort Devens initiated the day's program with a parade in Leominster, and this afternoon they paraded again in Fitchburg.

It was "open house" at Fort Devens, and hundreds of visitors arrived early and inspected the famous old camp where New Englanders received their army instruction 18 years ago.

Another big demonstration was held in Burlington where the Third

He evaded questions as to whether he would be back in baseball by 1938.

GONE FROM ABINGTON HOME SIX MONTHS

Missing for six months, Helen Callahan, 17, of Block street, Abington, was found today in Charles street jail.

Inspector William Ross of the missing persons bureau found her there under the name of Dianne Callahan.

Her mother, who had never relinquished search for her, was notified, and there was a tearful reunion in the jail.

The girl, according to Ross, was arrested for alleged theft of $3 worth of neckties three days ago. She is awaiting trial.

Police say there are indications that she was used as a pawn by older persons.

At the time of her arrest in a downtown department store, a man said to have been with her, was subdued after a struggle and vanished after putting up bail.

The girl, unable to provide bail, was jailed.

Inspector Ross found her in the course of his systematic routine check of all institutions.

Last month a girl friend saw her in Tyler street in Chinatown. But when the girl started to talk with Helen, an older woman seized Helen by the arm and pulled her away.

Detectives made a thorough search of the Chinese district, but without result.

When arrested the girl said she was 22 and lived in San Diego but was stopping temporarily in Appleton street, South End, with a sister.

The man who defaulted, police said, was a paroled Concord reformatory inmate.

Jailed Girl's Own Story

Telling her own story to a Boston Evening American reporter today in Charles street jail, 17-year-old Helen Callahan, who was found in jail after being sought for six months, said it was a desire to travel that made her disappear.

She left her first job as soon as she had $10 saved up.

She admitted having a boy friend.

"Who hasn't?" she asked.

But she shielded his name.

This is her story:

As Told to Eugene Spatola

"On the day I left home, I went to Brockton to an employment agency for a job. That was in October in the middle of the month.

"After talking with a clerk in the agency for a while she told me that there was a position as housekeeper available in Roxbury.

QUIT WITH $10

"I decided that I would take this position so I returned to my home in Abington to pack my clothes and other belongings.

"When I got home I told my mother that I had decided to go to work and that I had a job in Roxbury. I said goodbye to my mother and left for the job.

"I had no intention of keeping the job because I wanted to travel from place to place. So when I had ten dollars I decided that I would quit the Roxbury place.

M'ARTHUR LAUDS PUBLIC FOR PART IN ARMY DAY

By GENERAL DOUGLAS MacARTHUR
Chief of Staff, United States Army

Washington, April 6—Very naturally the Army is delighted to know that the public is participating so widely and so enthusiastically in the celebration of Army Day.

Particularly the Army is happy to note a distinct effort to insure, through the public press and [illegible], a universal understanding of the true significa[illegible] of the Day.

Today came first by its designation as Army Day through its selection by patriotic societies as a significant date on which annually to focus popular attention upon the essentials of our nation's security problem.

Gen. MacArthur

Since then the day has come also to be officially and popularly recognized as the Army's anniversary date.

The Army feels, therefore, that it takes part in the day's exercises in the capacity of a guest.

Justifiably proud of its position as a possession and trusted servant of our government and our people, the Army looks upon the day as one on which the public should be offered special opportunity to inspect, examine and become more closely acquainted with its soldiers, both professional and civilian.

To this end it ceases for the day its customary routine of duties and places itself both locally and nationally at the complete disposal of the American citizenry.

For the Army itself the day is one of self-rededication to the service of the country it is sworn to defend.

Nation Hails Army Day; Observance Begun Here

Cavalry and Seventh Field Artillery, attached to Fort Ethan Allen, observed Army Day with a mounted review and motorized formations.

At Fort Wright, near New London, a regimental review, inspection of the post and band concert were held.

The Army Base here closed at 11 o'clock.

PARADE IN CAMBRIDGE

On the Cambridge Common, at 3:30 p. m., the Cambridge units of the National Guard will parade.

Suffolk Voitures No. 543, "The Forty and Eight," representing over 40 American Legion posts in Suffolk County, will hold ceremonies at YD Club headquarters at 200 Huntington avenue.

The city's official celebration is being held tomorrow in order to give the greater number an opportunity to participate.

Consisting of platoon drills, the program, sponsored by the M. O. W. W., will be held tomorrow afternoon, at two o'clock, in Boston Arena, with Governor Curley, Mayor Mansfield, Major-General Fox Conner, Admiral William Sims and Rear Admiral Henry H. Hough among the invited guests.

Representing the various classes will be the regular army, the national guard, Boy and Girl Scouts, the American Legion and many other patriotic units.

"COLONEL" TO YOU

Probably the most interested spectator will be Frank Rene Souliere of Cambridge, colonel to you and the youngest person to enlist in the A. E. F. and fight through the World War.

He is only 29 years old today, but no grizzled "vet" viewing tomorrow's stirring military demonstration will have more poignant memories than this one, who enlisted at the age of 12 years, seven months and nine days!

Frank was born in San Jose, Cal. He had two sisters. His mother was dead when the war broke out. His father, who had immigrated from France, was exempt from military service in his native country but, nevertheless, went back and rejoined his old regiment, the Blue Devil Chasseurs.

The children accompanied him and were established in a home in Bordeaux. Then the United States entered the war and American troops were stationed at Bordeaux.

ENLISTED AT 12

Frank was eager to join them. Finally, with his father's consent, he went to the colonel of the regiment and asked to be enlisted.

A flyweight when he first put on the uniform of Uncle Sam, the boy weighed 95 pounds and was approximately four feet six inches in height. He was assigned to the headquarters company of the 18th. That meant carrying messages and running all sorts of errands for the headquarters staff.

Then the unit was ordered to the fighting area. Frank soon became a veteran soldier. At Soissons, Chateau Thierry, day after day, he carried dispatches across shell-torn fields while machine gun bullets whistled about him.

Once, when serving as interpreter and running at Soissons during the summer of 1918, he was sent with a message from regimental headquarters to the commanding officer of a battery of French 75s, calling for a barrage to disperse the enemy.

A shrapnel shell burst directly over his head and he was down. But, staggering to his feet, he kept on, the blood streaming from wounds in the forehead, lip and left leg.

He was finally carried to the Morte Fontaine field hospital by two buddies but not before he had personally delivered his message.

He has a Victory medal, with the battle claps—Champagne-Marne and Aisne-Marne and the French Croix de Guerre, with bronze palm.

You'll never guess his biggest thrill. It was when the late Ex-Governor Rolfe of California (then mayor of San Francisco) presented him to General Pershing and the latter, gripping his hand, said:

"Hullo, kid! How did you get over?"

Parades Mark Army Day Throughout Nation

By International News Service

Washington, April 6—America's soldiers today lined up for inspection by the man in the street as Army Day was celebrated throughout the length and breadth of the land.

Thousands of regular army and National Guard troops marched in every big city throughout the nation to pass in review this afternoon before the citizens to whom Army Day is dedicated.

Fifty thousand regular army and National Guard troops gathered in the shadow of the Capitol to lead the gigantic demonstration which has been planned here.

With the addition of American Legion units and other veteran organizations, a total of 65,000 marchers passed in review before Secretary of War Dern, Chief of Staff General Douglas MacArthur and other high government and army officials, as well as the citizenry.

Eighty-five of the Army's crack fighting 'planes roared overhead in Washington's first aerial demonstration of the newly created General Headquarters air force.

New York city witnessed the biggest demonstration, with 85,000 soldiers and veterans marching down Fifth avenue.

Old Glory was carried to the blare of martial music and the tramp of army feet up the principal thoroughfares of Chicago, San Francisco and other big cities from coast to coast.

Today was expected to be the biggest Army Day celebration the nation has ever witnessed.

Dern cautioned the nation not to misunderstand the celebrations as intended to glorify war.

"It is not my conception of Army Day that its purpose is to glorify war," he said. "Rather, it is my view, that the intent of Army Day is to focus attention on the constitutional mandate that one of the primary duties of government is to provide for the common defense."

House Empowers Roosevelt To Draft All War Reserves

By Associated Press

Washington, April 6—Shoving the McSwain anti-war profits bill slowly along, the House late today voted to empower the President to commandeer the nation's financial resources in war time.

Final vote on the bill was blocked for today, however, as House leaders forced adjournment by a vote of 128 to 48.

Without a single dissenting vote, the House approved an amendment by Representative Short (R-Mo) that would permit government control of all monetary resources for national defense.

The measure already gave the President power to draft man power and to place material resources, industrial organizations and public services under government control during a conflict.

The House accepted, too, a proposal by Representative Lee (D-Okla.) to permit conscription of the managers of transportation, communication, commerce and industry, the same as any other individual.

Yielding to a militant minority that demanded teeth in the measure, the House wrote into the bill a provision to confiscate all excess war profits by taxation.

In a surprise move, Chairman McSwain of the military committee pushed the amendment through without a record vote and without a note of opposition.

Backers of the drastic measure believed the action would assure a favorable reception in the Senate.

2 IN DANA CASE HELD FOR JURY

A ramification of the Professor Henry W. L. Dana case came up in Cambridge courts today when four boys were charged with stealing the car of Professor Dana's nephew a few nights ago.

Vincent Zaloga, 23, of Main street, Cambridge, charged with breaking and entering in the night time and larceny of an automobile, was held in $500 for the grand jury.

A 16-year-old Cambridge boy, arraigned in juvenile court, was also held for the grand jury, in charge of the probation officer.

Kenneth Sparks, 20, of Green street, and Benjamin Sobolewski, 17, of Pine street, both Cambridge, were placed on probation after being found guilty of using the automobile without authority. As a result of the accusations of one of the boys, Professor Dana is under indictment on a serious charge.

CURLEY PRAISES ARMY DAY AT AUTO SHOW

Governor Curley today officially opened the General Motors spring show before 1000 members of the General Motors organization, at a breakfast at the Copley Plaza.

Governor Curley in an eloquent address, discussed Army Day, former President Hoover, the Roosevelt recovery program and strikes, as he sounded the keynote of the show which will be held in Mechanics Buildings for the next week. He said:

"The mistakes former President Hoover made in his four years in office did much to teach us the way to recovery.

"I think his mistakes paved the way for the success that has been attained by President Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

"[illegible] and industrial crises? Don't [illegible] them bother you.

"JUST GROWING PAINS"

"Such manifestations are merely a sign of growing pains in the nation. Strikes never come in times of depression, but always make their appearance on the eve of prosperity, and we are returning to that condition. It is a healthy sign."

R. H. Grant, vice-president and director of General Motors Corporation, here to attend the opening, was referred to by the Governor as a "General Grant" of the automobile industry.

Army Day, Governor Curley said, calls to mind today defense of the country, not only against invasion from abroad, but against revolt within.

Grant stated that the company is spending $700,000 in 51 cities throughout the country to promote the General Motors' spring shows.

AUTO LEADERS ATTEND

H. J. Walsh, Boston zone manager of the Chevrolet Motor Car Company, was toastmaster.

Police Commissioner Eugene M. McSweeney, Mark Sullivan, chairman of the Boston Finance Commission, and General Motors district managers attended.

The show opened at 12:30 today and will close on April 13.

BANKERS FREED in Detroit Charge

Detroit, April 6 (AP)—A federal court jury acquitted three former officials of the closed First National Bank of Detroit today on a charge that they made false reports to the comptroller of the currency.

The defendants were John Ballantyne, Herbert L. Chittenden and John H. Hart.

Other indictments, returned by the Federal Grand Jury, are pending against the same three defendants and 31 other Detroit and Michigan bankers.

HAMILTON NEAR COLLAPSE AT DEATH CELL

Huntsville, Tex., April 6—Raymond Hamilton was brought to the Texas penitentiary here today from Dallas and immediately was taken to the death house from which he escaped last July.

Hamilton's knees were shaking as he waited in the "bull pen" before being taken to the death house.

Shackled with a chain held by Warden W. W. Waid, who sat beside him in the back seat of an automobile, the former auto thief who became one of the nation's three top public enemies was closely guarded by Texas Rangers and Dallas officers on the trip from Dallas.

Today, before he left Dallas, Hamilton nonchalantly expounded his method of operation in his dozens of battles with police during a career as a bank robber and escaped convict.

"Anytime anything happened I would just shoot at the men who bobbed up and started shooting at me. I always tried to be ready to move faster than they did."

Hamilton assumed a joking air as he talked with reporters, while the federal government bluntly told state authorities that unless Hamilton was executed within 30 days the federal government would step in and bring him to trial in federal court.

Asked why he didn't put up a fight when captured last night in the Rock Island freight yards at Forth Worth, he calmly remarked:

"I didn't have a chance and I knew it. Who knows, I may get a better chance some other time. I am always looking for the breaks."

The gunman admitted he had fought with the National Guardsmen in Mississippi last month. Asked how he got away, he replied:

"It was the same way we always did. The officers jumped me and started shooting. I drove away as fast as I could."

Only at the mention of his mother and Katie Jenkins, his sweetheart, did Hamilton show emotion.

"Yes, I love Katie Jenkins," he said.

Katie is reported to be on the West Coast starting a new life, away from the gunman's influence.

Washington, April 6—Thomas H. Robinson, Jr., who kidnaped Mrs. Alice Speed Stoll in Louisville, Ky., was reported today to be cornered by the Department of Justice officials.

Robinson and Alvin Karpis, the Bremer kidnapers, are rated as Public Enemies No. 1.

Tracing a slim thread of clues, accorded by discovery of bills from the $50,000 ransom fund, the federal operatives were reported close to their quarry today.

Nobody Walks

By Associated Press

Burlington, Vt., April 6—The first army parade in the history of Burlington in which not a man on horseback or afoot participated was witnessed today.

The 150 vehicles, constituting the motorized equipment of the Seventh Field Artillery and Third Cavalry, stationed at Fort Ethan Allen, paraded through the city to celebrate Army Day.

Even the band moved on wheels, being borne by the four leading trucks.

ARRESTED IN STORE

"I had stayed the last weekend with a girl friend in Appleton street. Tuesday afternoon I went down town in Boston and I went into the store where the police officers arrested me.

"While I was looking at some jewelry I noticed a salesgirl point her finger at me while she was talking to someone I later learned was a store detective.

"This store detective came up and grabbed me by the arm and he and the salesgirl rushed me into a private office.

"I told them that they had made a mistake.

"They said I would have to wait a little while and then two police officers came into the room and took me to police headquarters.

SHIELDS BOY FRIEND

"I gave the police a wrong name and address because I didn't want my folks to know I had been arrested.

"I had a boy friend. Every girl has. I am not going to tell you who he is. He is a nice fellow and I am not going to get him mixed up.

"I don't know whether I will go home or not after I get out of here. I haven't made up my mind.

"The talk that I was hanging around Chinatown is absolutely false. I may have walked through there on one occasion but I just happened to be passing through there.

"The talk about me being in the store with a man is wrong. I went into that store alone.

"I am sure that when I go to court I will be able to prove I am innocent."

Parisian Lacks Love Tryst Proof

MLLE. COLLETTE FRANCOIS

By Associated Press

New York, April 6—Collette Francois' $100,000 seduction suit against Arthur M. Loew, motion picture magnate, has been thrown out of court, but the Parisian girl is sailing for home today "very well pleased."

Her feelings were described by her attorney, Bernard H. Sandler, who added that Miss Francois and her mother left with the "kindliest feelings toward Mr. Loew."

Nathan Burkan, counsel for the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer executive, denied any settlement had been reached.

Justice Aaron J. Levy, who dismissed the 21-year-old girl's $100,000 suit after a conference in chambers late yesterday, did so on the ground that she had insufficient evidence. He called it "very, very said."

Miss Francois testified Loew was the father of her 4-year-old daughter. The girl's attorney said there would be no appeal.

BRUNO WITNESS DENIES LYING

By International News Service

Flemington, N. J., April 6—Benjamin Heier today pleaded not guilty to a charge of perjury in connection with testimony he gave for the defense at the recent trial of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, when arraigned here before County Judge Adam O. Robbins.

He was released in $2000 bail pending his trial which is expected to be on April 29.

Heier, a New York night club cashier, was indicted on the charge that he had testified falsely and maliciously that he saw Isidor Fisch, Hauptmann's former partner, now dead, leave St. Raymond's cemetery in the Bronx, N. Y., the night the $50,000 Lindbergh ransom was paid there three years ago this month.

Edward J. Reilly, in New York city today, repudiated a statement attributed to him to the effect that Hauptmann had lost his "iron nerve" in his death cell at Trenton.

The ousted chief of the condemned man's counsel said:

"When I talked to Hauptmann last week he was cool and calm. He was confident he would be cleared eventually, and his confinement has not changed him, physically or mentally."

Bruno's Wife Cuts Tour; Manager Denies Failure

Milwaukee, April 6—Mrs. Anna Hauptmann planned to return to New York late today, postponing her tour to raise funds for the appeal of her husband, Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

Arno Weber, manager of the tour, denied the tour was cancelled. He said Mrs. Hauptmann found it essential to return to her home.

Weber also denied reports the tour managers were disappointed by the size of crowds and contributions. He said about $1000 was taken in at three halls here.

Driver Seized After Chase

Shots Halt 4-Mile Somerville Dash

Somerville police chased an alleged drunken driver four miles today, capturing him in Cambridge after firing several shots.

His companion also was arrested.

The pursued car wove through heavy traffic and several dangerous intersections, clipped several other machines and finally wrecked a fire alarm box at Broadway and Ellery street, Cambridge.

The car also was wrecked and the driver, according to police, ran, ignoring shots fired into the air.

He was caught after a foot chase. Police say he is Edward Walsh, 25, of Prospect street, Cambridge.

HELD ON CHARGES

He was charged with being drunk, driving while under the influence of liquor, driving so as to endanger the lives and safety of the public, and driving after revocation of his license.

His companion, who did not run from the wrecked car, was said to be Louis Matos, 24, of Thorndike street, Cambridge. He was charged with drunkenness.

Patrolmen John L. Cameron and Leo Reardon were in a cruising car at Edward Wilson square, junction of Somerville avenue and Elm street, when the car came from Davis square.

BAKER'S WAGON HIT

They signaled the driver to stop, they said, but he kept on, through Somerville avenue. They caught up to the car once, but a burst of speed carried it away from them.

The chase went through Union square, Webster avenue and Prospect avenue to Broadway, at 55 to 60 miles an hour, according to the police. A baker's wagon was hit on Somerville avenue.

JIMMY BEATS KNIFE

Survives 2 Hours of Surgery

In' Fairly Good Shape'

By PEGGY DOYLE

Fall River, April 6—The operation on 13-year-old Jimmy Neilson for his "upside down" stomach was successfully completed in Truesdale hospital here at 12:10 p. m. today.

Under the knife for more than one and a half hours, surgeons reported Jimmy was "in fairly good condition" at the completion of the operation.

While Jimmy was in the operating room, Alyce Jane McHenry, who is recovering from a similar operation, walked about her room in the same hospital.

'Fairly Good Shape'

The bulletin issued at the hospital read:

"Operation for diaphragmatic hernia satisfactorily completed. All small intestines and most of large with the appendix and spleen were found in the left chest cavity andleft lung, which was almost entirely collapsed.

"There was an extensive rent in the diaphragm to which the intestines were firmly attached. All were returned to the abdominal cavity.

"The patient was in fairly good condition at the completion of the operation, which lasted more than one and a halfhours."

Jimmy's stomach was twice its normal size and the official report was interpreted as indicating the operation was fully as serious as that of Alyce's.

The enlargement of the stomach in Jimmy's case was regarded as a serious factor, and in some respects his operation was looked upon as graver than Alyce's.

Forty physicians and surgeons from Boston, New York and other eastern cities witnessed the operation.

That is more than saw Alyce's upside down stomach set right.

Jimmy, fingering the signet ring given him by the San Jose, Cal., Boy Scouts, was as brave as Alyce about the ordeal. But his mother and the doctors were not so confident.

His mother held his hand tightly and walked along beside him as he was wheeled to the operating room. At the door she gave him a final tight squeeze and bent over to kiss him.

He flung his arms about her neck.

Cheered by Alyce

Alyce Jane meanwhile was waiting anxiously on the sun porch of the hospital after having sent Jimmy a message:

"Good luck. You'll be all right."

The many newspaper reporters were herded into a parlor far from the operating amphitheatre. This was because the visiting physicians and surgeons said they did not wish to be recognized and their names published.

Dr. Philemon E. Truesdale, to whom Alyce came from Omaha, operated on Jimmy, with the assistance of Dr. William Atwood and Dr. Cornelius Hawen. Dr. Alfred Miller administered ether. All ar of the hospital staff.

Before going on the wheeling stretcher for his ride down the corridor, the California boy took a look at some Bible texts given him by a Baptist minister on the train coming East.

From Iowa today came word that Alyce's father, Paul F. McHenry, would contest his wife's petition to be appointed sole guardian of the child in Massachusetts.

"We both rank equally as guardians now," he is reported to have stated. "I will contest any move for a change in the situation.

"My wife's action is a mystery to me.

"She wrote me this:

"'Alyce has been receiving money which is being kept for her in the hospital safe. Alyce had a letter from a Fall River bank suggesting she start a savings account.

"'That requires a guardian. The attorney for the hospital board tells me there is no reason why I shouldn't be guardian.

"'You will receive a copy of my petition.'"

"I don't see any reason why we should not handle the matters together. I am just as competent to share in looking after Alyce's affairs as I ever was in the past. There's no need of a change.

"Our home was in Nebraska until I came to Iowa Falls on March 25 and when Alyce is better, I expect her and her mother to join me here in Iowa Falls.

"I work here now as a salesman for the Iowa Falls Monument Company."

Dance With Tears in Eyes

Girls Observe Fete Fire Victim Planned

The dance of an Everett high school society ended early today to the strains of the home-going waltz.

Gradually couples, all in their 'teens, drifted out through the wide doors of Oak Manor in Melrose and sought out their automobiles.

But the end of the sorority dance was not accompanied by the gayety and carefree chattering which is usually part and parcel of such affairs.

For Harriet Kingsbury was dead—burned to death on the eve of the dance for which she had worked and planned. She was its missing chairman.

The 19-year-old Everett high school graduate had been rescued from her burning home at 706 Broadway, Everett, by firemen.

But missing her small brother, Jackie, she dashed back into the building just at the moment when the reservoir on the kitchen range exploded, spraying blazing fuel.

She died just a few hours before the last night's dance orchestra tuned up.

Miss Alice Dustin, 30, a maid at the same address, critically burned in the same fire, was on the danger list at Whidden Hospital today.

Police were trying to locate her relatives in Plymouth, N. H.

'LOOK Killer' SANE

JOB WAITING SIGN TOTER

By Associated Press

New York, April 6—Frank Greges, the honest sandwich man who could "kill with a look," can have his old job back, W. H. Combs, partner in the Wall street firm of Belden & Company, said today.

"We have been looking for him to come back and chat with us, as he said he would," Combs said.

"If he looks as though he can hold down his old job, we will use him."

Combs said Greggs is still on the firm's payroll.

"But," Combs added, "he'll have to be in a lot better condition than he was two weeks ago, if he is to be employed here."

Meanwhile, Greggs has returned to the green pastures of Battery Park.

Almost any day he can be found sitting there watching the liners from Europe and the small craft that scurry about the harbor.

He won't talk about finding Belden's $42,000 worth of negotiable securities while he was still a dollar-a-day sandwich man early in February.

He refuses to discuss that incident that compelled him to accost a man in his Bowery lodging house five weeks ago and shout, "I am God! Look upon me and you die!"

The man dared to look and fell dead.

Greggs was placed under observation in the psychopathic ward of Bellevue Hospital, and discharged two weeks later.

Sandusky, O., April 6.—Philip Nicholas, known in boxing circles as George Nichols, said today he will file suit for divorce against Miss Katherine (Kit) Klein, of Buffalo, national woman's speed skating champion.

For a week Nichols has been waiting for Miss Klein to come here to discuss the divorce action. She had not arrived today.

The marriage became known Monday, when Miss Klein announced her engagement to a Sayre, Pa., physician. Confronted with records of the marriage Miss Klein said it wasn't so.

Nichols said it was. Finally Miss Klein admitted she had married Nichols at Ripley, N. Y., Oct. 9, 1933.

'1000 TIMES NO!'

NEVER! NEVER!

Will Mary Marry Merry Max? 'No—No!'

By TRAVIS FULTON

New York, April 6—"Never! . . . Never!! . . . Never!!! Please print that 'Never' a thousand times at least."

Mary Kirk Brown stamped her 3-A black patent pump and exclaimed "Ouch" at the impact. She withdrew a tiny high-arched foot from the shoe and explained:

"It's new—but I'm trying to tell you I'm not going to marry Max Baer ever."

But, this correspondent asked, why not? Max seems a good guy and there'd be a lot of laughter in life with him and he is on the up curve and—but Mary interrupted the eulogy:

"Oh, it's not because he's a prizefighter, but I've just got out of one marriage—my decree becomes final Sunday—and the next marriage has got to stick. And a marriage with Max would not, decidedly.

"Marriage doesn't go with prizefighting. I told Max never to marry. He is a good guy, as you say. Everyone likes him. But—"

The phone rang. Mary rose from the couch and strode to answer it—an alluring figure with red-gold hair and Southern tan.

Smilingly, Mary returned to explain:

"Mother Is the Boss Now"

"The trouble with Max and me is that we've different temperaments, different in too many ways to tell. No that wasn't he calling. But he's in town. Am I annoyed that he didn't call? Nonsense, no one could be annoyed at Max, he's too much fun."

Mary pulled a black velvet Robin Hood hat with a brilliant quill over her smoldering tresses and draped a three-skin scarf from her shoulders. And she observed:

"About this marriage thing—Max said to a newspaper man that he would wait five years for me. Imagine anyone waiting five years to fulfill a yearning for marriage? Not this girl! And I'm going to Europe soon. Oh, no, not running away. There's not a man on earth could make me run to or from him!

"But to make the marriage situation even more certain, you can say that my mother won't let me, and mother is the boss in this family now."

And Max, who arrived in town yesterday, is apparently doubly out, for he said:

"I'm through with the ladies. I'm a fighter. Gals are good publicity but bad for fighting. I'm a fighter. I'll fight anyone. But no more girls. Mary is a swell girl and a good friend. But I can't marry for five years and——"

He was detraining and he would not pose for photographers until scouts beat the background to flush all feminine figures from the scene.

"THROUGH WITH GALS"

"I'M A FIGHTER"—Max Baer waves a happy greeting as he arrives in N. Y. with a sudden aversion for "the gals," who he says are "bad for fighting."

"MOTHER'S BOSS NOW"—Mary Kirk Brown, who insisted yesterday that while Max Baer is a "good guy," she will never, never marry him.

Reno, Nev., April 6—The nation's divorce capital looked forward today to getting better acquainted with its reigning princess, Barbara Hutton Mdivani, heiress to the Woolworth millions.

Princess Barbara, in Reno to divorce her Georgian prince, Alexis Mdivani, broke the ice of formality and seclusion which had surrounded her stay here by going for a brief automobile ride late yesterday.

The automobile in which she rode had been delivered to her in the morning.

She clapped her hands in glee upon inspecting it, then entered with her stepmother and drove about the town before returning to the 17-room mansion which is her home here.

Provincetown School Burns

Firebug Suspected in $40,000 Blaze

Provincetown, April 6—The Governor Bradford grammar school was destroyed by fire today in a spectacular blaze which caused damage estimated at $40,000.

The early morning sky was lurid with the reflection of the flames when the 75-foot cupola which surmounted the roof toppled into the raging fire.

The school, built in 1892, was a landmark and many residents who received their early schooling there felt a sense of personal loss as the building was consumed.

The fire was of undetermined origin. Police Chief John Williams immediately began an investigation to determine if it were incendiary.

Heiress to Carter Wealth Sails for Europe as Bride

Newlywed Mr. and Mrs. Carl Bray Nowell of Somerville sailed on the Olympic for Europe today with the knowledge that they had an unexpected "cushion" of $150,000 behind them.

Mrs. Nowell was the former Miss Mary C. MacFarlane, who as secretary to the eccentric Miss Nellie P. Carter of Boston, inherited $150,000 while relatives of the rich spinster received but $5000 each.

There was a widely publicized court battle, the relatives trying to break the will which disposed of at least $100,000 more to non-relatives. But the courts sustained Miss Carter's disposal of the money.

Nowell, formerly employed by Lee Higginson & Co., is now an auditor for a Boston investment house, and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Nowell of 4 Essex street, Somerville.

The couple was married Thursday, it was disclosed today.

The honeymoon in Europe is expected to last for at least a month, after which Mr. and Mrs. Nowell will live in Swampscott.

WAR FEAR GRIPS BRITAIN AS EDEN REPORTS TOUR

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER
International News Service Staff Correspondent (World Copyright, 1935, by International News Service
(Reproduction in Whole or in Part Strictly Prohibited.)

London, April 6—The horror of possible war gripped Britain today as Captain Anthony Eden told the Foreign Affairs committee of the Cabinet of his exploratory trip to Central and Eastern Europe.

Authoritative voices begged for calm, like a man appearing on the stage of a crowded theater where fire has begun to nibble at the curtain.

"It would be wrong to assume a state of European panic exists" is the watchword Eden has given out to the British press.

But the flames keep licking upward, and the Beaverbrook press, seeing in them a growing argument for isolation from the continent, appeals for Britain and America to stand together "in an everlasting brotherhood with our own kith and kin."

In the strictly military field these flames were:

Dangerous Flames

First, Foreign Secretary Sir John Simon's flat statement that Hitler told him Germany's air force already equalled England's.

Second, the French general staff order not only to man all its formidable forts along the German border but maintaining 24-hour air patrols, constantly watching the sky across the Rhine.

Third, Italy's mobilization to nearly full war strength.

Fourth, Austria's request to raise her army to around 100,000.

In the diplomatic field, tongues of fire flicker equally fast.

The isolationist group exclaims that the revelations of M. Taittinger, of the national defense subcommittee of the French chamber's finance committee, are probably true despite a denial by War Minister Maurin.

Taittinger in effect declared the general staffs of France, Russia, Italy and Czechoslovakia have already come to a military air agreement of mutual defense in case of German aggression.

The implied hope was to get Britain to join.

Revelations of Taittinger are borne out by information reaching your correspondent. It has often been objected France and Russia could not cooperate because Poland separates Russia from Germany.

Soviet Entente

But best authority points out that the Red Army possess hundreds of bombing planes with sufficient radius to fly by night across the narrow strip of Poland separating Russia from Czechoslovakia, then base themselves at Prague to operate over German territory clear to Berlin.

There is little doubt that some such considerations lie back of the Franco-Russian entente and today some British voices are raised against the prospect of Britain supporting any such arrangement, which in fact is the backbone of the eastern pact.

"Spectator," influential weekly, says:

"How would the average Englishman view the prospect of being aligned with the Russia of Stalin and the GPU against Germany, even the Germany of Hitler, Goebbels and Streicher?

"But is it conceivable that Germany would ever attack Russia or Russia Germany if it was certain such action would bring this country, to say nothing of France and Italy, into the field against the aggressor?"

Goebbels Tells Danzig Hitler Offers Peace

By International News Service

Danzig, April 6—In a fervid climax to the Nazi election campaign, Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, Reich minister of propaganda, evoked tumultuous applause in a jammed auditorium today as he said:

"Paris loved the German republic because it was weak. Paris hates us now because we represent a powerful Germany."

Dr. Goebbels, third of Chancellor Hitler's right-hand men to appeal for Nazi votes on the eve of the free city's annual election of Parliament's Lower House, recalled to his cheering audience the rapid progress Germany has made under its Reichsfuehrer.

"Two years ago we were still in the strait-jacket of Versailles, he declared. "Now we have crushed the treaty.

"We did not build up an army to wage war, but to safeguard peace. A disarmed Germany lost among highly armed nations would have been a cheap invitation to wage war on her.

"Hitler has often held out the hand of peace. It is up to the world to grasp it.

"We do not want any adjustment of frontiers by force. We cannot, and will not, attempt any such adjustment. But tomorrow we will show the whole world, by means of the peaceful ballot, how Danzig thinks and feels."

France Holds 60,000 Conscripts on Guard

By International News Service

Paris, April 6—The French cabinet today voted to keep under the colors for an emergency period of three months the outgoing class of semi-annual conscripts which ordinarily would be disbanded a week from today.

The cabinet's decision was made known in this communique:

"The government has decided to maintain under colors the contingent which would normally be liberated on April 13.

"This contingent of 60,000 men will be maintained under the colors until the time when new recruits who will be incorporated in April will have received sufficient training.

"This contingent will be liberated on July 14 at the latest and will be utilized to guard the frontiers and undertake defensive organization of the territory. The men who are held over will be dispensed within one reserve period."

The cabinet also approved expenditure of 1,800,000,000 francs ($126,000,000) for aviation and 4,500,000,000 francs ($315,000,000) for war materials.

Mrs. Margaret M. Reeh, 34, a prisoner in Sherborn reformatory, escaped today, according to police.

She escaped through a window of her room from which the screen had previously been mysteriously removed.

Although her home is on Long Island, N. Y., she has a friend in Boston whom she would possibly go to see, police said.

Mrs. Reeh was sentenced in Fitchburg last December for larceny.

Five years ago she was arrested in Arlington, charged with duping many women to pay small deposits on fancy dresses that were never delivered.

Mr. William Randolph Hearst
c/o " Detroit Times",
Detroit, Mich.

Dear Sir:

We, the members of the Ukrainian Democratic Club of Wayne County, hereby wish to commend you for publishing the series of articles entitled "Famine in Ukraine". We, who are Americans of Ukrainian descent, are especially grateful to you for exposing the ruthless tactics which the Communistic rulers of Red Russia are now employing in exploiting the millions of downtrodden people living within the boundaries of the so-called "Red Paradise".

Though we have had news of the terrible famine devastating both the people and the country, through private sources and have held protest meetings to voice our feelings against the outrage perpetrated against our countrymen, we believe that your paper has been the first to give a true and fair account of this famine to the American people. For your courageous gesture in this respect, your name, Mr. Hearst, will always be respectfully spoken by the lips of every Ukrainian man, women, and child.

Thanking you sincerely for the great service rendered to our compatriots, we remain,

In gratitude,

MRS. SLATTERY BACKS TEACHERS' OATH

The American flag should be on display in every school and college classroom in the United States.

School children, including high school students, should be made to pledge allegiance to the flag daily.

Every school teacher, instructor and professor should be required to take the oath of allegiance.

These were the demands made today by Mrs. Francis E. Slattery, former president of the League of Catholic Women, in endorsing the teachers' oath bill.

"I believe that there are still several schools in this Commonwealth where the American flag is not displayed. I don't think that any excuse can be offered for its absence in a classroom.

"As far as the teachers' oath bill is concerned, I am heartily in favor of its passage. There is no reason why a teacher who claims to be patriotic and loyal to the constitution should refuse to take the oath.

"In addition the Legislature should make it mandatory for children and high school students to daily pledge allegiance to the American flag."

STOCK EXPOSES 'FAIR,' INSISTS JUDGE BURNS

Judge John J. Burns of Belmont, general counsel for the Federal Securities and Exchange Commission, said today that recent disclosures regarding stock promotions have established the commission as a mighty force in American life.

"We eventually hope to eradicate the large interstate fraudulent promotions and to give the public the protection to which the people are entitled," he said.

He promised action where action is warranted

Judge Burns is in Boston for a brief visit.

His trip here, as it happened, coincided with surprise disclosures at the Boston hearing of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Regarding the Boston hearings, Judge Burns said:

"Similar hearings are being held all over the country, although perhaps they have not been as 'flamboyant' as the hearings here."

GAVE BIG DECISION

Judge Burns, who is only 32, resigned from the Massachusetts Superior Court to take his present position at Washington.

While on the Superior bench, he handed down the huge Beacon Participations decision, holding directors responsible for losses.

He has 50 lawyers working out of his Washington headquarters, including John L. Flynn, who is conducting the hearings here before Edmund L. Brandon, New England administrator of the SEC.

Judge Burns conferred with Flynn regarding testimony brought out at Boston hearings.

Judge Burns said that in his opinion the material brought out at the various hearings is the strongest argument for the existence of the commission, which has been both attacked and defended in financial circles.

Legitimate investment houses welcome the Securities law, according to Judge Burns, who explained that previously these firms had difficulty in obtaining certain information which they wished to supply to customers.

Now the government demands that all information be divulged by companies issuing the securities.

ALL HEARINGS FAIR

Regarding complaints by attorneys for some of the witnesses that the hearings were "unfair," Judge Burns said:

"The hearings are being conducted strictly in accordance with the powers given the commission by Congress and in the same manner as Interstate Commerce Commission hearings."

When hearings here in various cases are concluded, reports will be made by Brandon to Joseph L. Kennedy, chairman of the SEC.

Judge Burns spoke reluctantly, saying he was "gun shy" about commenting on the situation when the investigations are still going on. He paid special tribute to Flynn, who like himself is youthful. Flynn is 28.

"He combines intelligence with courage to a marked degree," said Judge Burns. Flynn is a New York lawyer.

FINDS ROMANCE IN "MIDNIGHT SUN" LAND

"I was ADRIFT in BOSTON for a fact!"

"I had just arrived in Boston from New York. I knew no one here and, of course knew nothing about the city. Frankly I was discouraged because it was absolutely essential that I economize at once and move into a furnished room where the rent would be low.

"Where could I find such a place and, more important, how soon? I happened to be reading the Sunday Advertiser, and glanced through the furnished room ads. With their convenient classification by district, they proved the solution to all my problems, for I found just the kind of a room I wanted that very day."

This young man's experience is typical of hundreds who have simplified the task of finding a nice furnished room by referring to American-Advertiser Want Ads. They have taken the ads that appealed to them to the Free Rental Bureau, on the fourth floor of the R. H. White Co., and Barbara Holmes has given them detailed information on each one and, many more that she has listed in her files. HUGE JOBS BILL MUST WAIT ROOSEVELT'S RETURN

Washington, April 6—The administration's $4,880,000,000 works relief bill, on which Congress completed action yesterday, will be signed by the President upon his return from his Caribbean fishing trip Tuesday or Wednesday, it was said at the White House today.

At the same time Mr. Roosevelt probably will announce the set-up of the works relief organization under the bill.

Vice-President Garner and Speaker Byrns today signed the bill to be sent to the White House.

The early return of the Chief Executive from his Florida fishing trip was understood to have caused the abandonment of earlier plans to rush the bill south by airplane for his signature.

July 1 was circled on the administration calendar today as the date for putting the main part of the program into effect. On that date, officials said, the government will move to provide $50-a-month jobs for able-bodied men and women now on the dole.

An effort will be made to increase the number on work relief quickly from the present total of 2,500,000 to 3,500,000.

SHIFT "UNEMPLOYABLES"

The relief administration has said it would go ahead at that time also with its plan to remove "unemployables" from relief rolls and return them to the care of states and communities.

Harry L. Hopkins, the relief administrator; Rexford G. Tugwell, Under-secretary of Agriculture; Secretary Ickes and Rear-Admiral Christian J. Peoples of the Treasury procurement office, have been mentioned as likely appointees to the board which the White House intends to set up to handle the huge fund.

Many observers have predicted Ickes will spend the $900,000,000 of work relief money earmarked for loans and grants to states and communities. Some have asserted also that he will be in charge of the $100,000,000 provided for rural electrification and the $450,000,000 housing fund.

Hopkins, however, has won the President's praise for speedy housing work done in the past.

Other funds set up by the work relief bill, with the provision that President Roosevelt may change the figures materially by transfers, include:

For highways, roads, streets and grade crossings, $800,000,000.

For rural rehabilitation and relief in stricken agricultural areas, and water conservation, $500,000,000.

For assistance to educational, professional and clerical persons, $300,000,000.

For continuing the civilian conservation corps, $600,000,000.

For sanitation, prevention of soil erosion, reforestration, forestration, flood control, rivers and harbors improvements and miscellaneous projects, $350,000,000.

MUST BE SPENT BY '37

The bill included $880,000,000 for financing the relief administration during the period of transition from dole to jobs. From this the public works administration is to be repaid approximately $300,000,000 loaned to the relief administration since the FERA's own funds were exhausted.

President Roosevelt is authorized under the measure to use money from the works funds for one year, if he desires, to pay benefits to farmers under the agriculture adjustment act.

The fund as a whole will have to be spent by June 30, 1937.

Roosevelt Ends Cruise Today; Fishing Is Good

By Associated Press

Miami, Fla., April 6—President Roosevelt tomorrow or Monday will go back to his desk after a refreshing fishing cruise in southern waters. He decided last night to conclude his trip on the week-end.

Reporting excellent fishing, the informed Marvin H. McIntyre, a secretary established here, he would land late tomorrow night or Monday.

Mr. Roosevelt was off Little San Salvador island, just north of Cat island, this morning. The destroyer Farragut trailed the yacht Nourmahal.

He will transfer to the Farragut for the return journey. There is still speculation as to where he will land.

Rotch Asks More Relief; Curley Refutes Hopkins

ERA Administrator Arthur G. Rotch today conferred by long-distance telephone with Harry L. Hopkins to determine just what part of the $4,800,000,000 work relief appropriation will come to Massachusetts.

He was quite sure, Rotch said, that there might be an increase in $6,250,000 originally planned, of which $3,000,000 has been received.

He did not know, however, where the reports that Hopkins would send $1,000,000 extra to Boston for relief originated. He did not know of any such plan, Rotch said.

Governor Curley issued a long and detailed denial of Hopkins' charges that Massachusetts had "done nothing" for its unemployed.

He pointed out that Massachusetts was the first state to take care of its unfortunates, and had even delayed a huge public works program planned in 1929 to take care of the inevitable slack in the building trades.

He declared that between 1930 and 1934 inclusive, Massachusetts distributed $32,893,900 in welfare and relief, and established the first old age pension plan in the country.

The Legislature, Governor Curley said, had already authorized the cities and towns to borrow $42,000,000 for relief, and was about to authorize the borrowing of $30,000,000 more.

Rotch and Governor Curley conferred for some time over plans to re-establish a use of the state departments in work projects, as was the case under the old CWA.

Allaire said the slide had obliterated the camp. He dug into the debris and uncovered the frozen body of a man. Unable to do anything further, he started for civilization.

The Taseko-Motherlode property is accessible even in summer only by pack-horse trails. Supplies for mining were flown in last summer.

TEXTILE PLEA TO ROOSEVELT

By Associated Press

Washington, April 6—Plans for direct appeal to President Roosevelt were expressed today by leaders of the Congressional bloc driving for administration action to aid the cotton textile industry.

Representative Martin (R., Mass.) said he knew of 50 members of the House and Senate who were eager to go to the White House with an appeal for immediate action. He added that "the number may reach 100 before the President returns."

The textile group was elated by passage in both Houses yesterday of the George amendment to the work relief bill, which authorizes the President to remove the processing tax and use money from the $4,880,000,000 work relief fund for benefit payments to cotton farmers.

New England members pointed out, however, that the amendment merely authorizes the President to take such action and did not require him to do so.

With the aid of officers John Hetherman and Arthur Hart, Lancaster took his wife and babe out of the house.

Firemen confined the blaze to one floor. The fire, which was believed due to an overheated furnace, caused damage of $1000.

"It is clear now," said William Green, A. F. of L. president, in his organization's monthly review of unemployment, "that we cannot expect this year's busy spring season in industry to bring any further progress in putting the unemployed to work."

HOOVER IN N. Y.; BANS POLITICS

By International News Service

New York, April 6—Special guards and official fanfare were absent when Herbert Hoover stepped from a train at Grand Central Terminal today, but a crowd of cheering citizens, who remembered he was once President, brought a broad smile to Hoover's face.

Arriving here to meet fellow directors of the New York Life Insurance Company and to make several public appearances, the former President was chary of comment.

"No politics," he told reporters. "I'm just a private citizen and this visit is purely business and social."

He was met by Edgar Rickard, an old friend; Lawrence Richey, former secretary at the White House, and Lewis Strauss, secretary during his war-time tenure as food administrator.

The former President will meet his former political opponent, Alfred E. Smith, at last twice during his stay: Monday night when both address an audience in behalf of the Salvation Army drive for relief funds, and at the meeting of insurance directors.

SECURITY BILL FIGHT LOOMS

By International News Service

Washington, April 6—With a perilous journey ahead, the President's economic security program was moved into the spotlight today as the next big administration measure for congressional action.

A split in the House leadership over methods of strategy and double-barrelled attack from Conservatives and Liberals endangered the bill in the House at the outset.

With the Senate finance committee yet to report the measure, a protracted Senate fight was certain after House passage.

Characterized by experts as the most far-reaching initial social legislation attempted by any nation, the program embraces old-age pensions, unemployment insurance, mothers' and children's aid and other social provisions.

Although President Roosevelt's message on the subject received more applause than any other sent to Congress this session, revolt seethed in the House over it.

Stella, 16, one of the seven children, drafted the abreviated form of the full name which, she explained, was built by the addition of a name with each generation.

Legally, Glafkos says, the old name stands—from "Pap" to "los."

The Green Light

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

One seemingly insignificant signal by the South player enabled North and South to collaborate on a magnificent defense in today's hand.

Both sides vulnerable.
East, Dealer.

North:
♠ 7 4
♡ A J 7 2
◇ A Q
♣ Q J 8 6 2

West:
♠ K Q J 8 5 3 2
♡ K 5

South:
♠ 6
♡ Q 10 8 6
◇ K 10 7
♣ 10 9 7 5 4

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♠	2 ♣
2 ♠	3 ♣	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

East's free raise is a little light due to the extreme weakness of his diamond suit.

Otherwise, the bidding is sound.

From a casual glance at all four hands it would seem that four spades can be made only against very poor defense.

Actually it requires an inspired defense to set this contract—only one N-S team was able to do so. Here is how they did it.

North opened a low club, East winning the King. South dropped the five.

West cashed the Ace of clubs, discarding a diamond, and on this trick South played the seven.

A low diamond was led, and North stopped to think. He could win the trick with the Queen but South's play of the five of clubs on the first trick when North knew he had the four must have been for some reason.

Apparently South did not want North to shift—and since only one shift could be thought of (to hearts) it was obvious South was warning partner he did not hold the King.

On the other hand West apparently did not hold the King of diamonds, else why his rush to discard a loser on this suit.

North therefore won the trick with the diamond Ace and returned the Queen. Now it was South's turn to make the brilliant play which North's defense had clearly indicated.

He overtook the Queen of diamonds and returned a heart. West was powerless to avoid the loss of two heart tricks, and was set one trick.

This hand was made at every other table. When North won the first diamond lead with the Queen, South could never get in.

Where North in desperation led out the Ace of hearts declarer was held to four odd.

But where North shifted to spades West having three trump entries to Dummy was able to set up two diamonds and make five.

Magic-Healing Salve

Cream Does Wonders for Blemished Skin

By THE BEAUTY EDITOR

THERE SEEMS to be no end of tricks in the cosmeticians' beauty bags this spring, and for this happy abundance we give honest thanks.

If we had the time and space we would devote an entire column to the new spring preparations which are designed to turn leathery, blemished skins into glowing, translucent ones with little or no loss of time.

However, when a salve with such a versatile array of achievements comes along as to merit a place in the cosmetic hall of fame, we think it is well worth your attention.

If your skin is the type that is inclined to harbor bumps and blemishes, and no amount of fussing over it has ever done any good, this cream will probably work like a charm.

It is a highly medicated salve which brings rapid healing to rashes which form in broken patches on the skin. It is also miraculously effective in bad cases of sunburn, cold-sores and open eruptions. It is applied liberally over the affected parts and allowed to remain on. It should never be rubbed into the skin.

Its healing power is so rapid that within eight hours blemishes will have vanished. This salve is a real triumph, and in addition to its medicinal effect gives the skin a smooth, silky appearance. It hails from a famous Fifth avenue salon which is noted for its corrective preparations.

To learn the name of this rapid-healing cream call Miss Shelby, Liberty 4000, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, Boston, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for a personal reply.

IT'S SIMPLE To Improve POSTURE

Question—Lately I have noticed that my shoulders are beginning to droop, thus spoiling the entire appearance of my figure. What do you advise?

D. P., Brockton.

Answer—Be sure to remember that correct posture is one of the most important things in health and beauty. If your shoulders are inclined to droop, I would suggest that you practice correct posture. The simplest and easiest place to do this is right in your own home. Walk around the room balancing a book on your head. At first you will have difficulty in keeping it there, but as you grow more adept, it will become more and more easy. Glance at your posture in a mirror while doing this and you will find that you are standing erect, chest out, stomach in and shoulders back.

Question: Please tell me how to apply rouge so as to make my face appear round. I have a long nose and facial contour; the chin seems to be short in proportion to the rest of my face.

M. R., Dorchester.

Answer: Since your nose and face are inclined to be long, I would advise you to apply your rouge away from your nose and more toward the side of the check. This will make your face appear shorter and fuller.

Books on Parade

By MILES ALDEN

ON WRITING THE BIOGRAPHY OF A MODEST MAN—By Rollo Walter Brown—Harvard Press.

When Mr. Brown first suggested to the late Dean LeBaron Russell Briggs that a biography should be written of him, the beloved dean replied:

"But you write books about celebrities, and I am not one."

How Mr. Brown, a life-long friend of Dean Briggs, succeeded in writing the biography is a story in itself.

On only three occasions would the Dean consent to talk directly of himself and these resolved themselves into monologues with Dean Briggs answering yes or no to certain legends and anecdotes concerning his life.

Mr. Brown has captured the spirit of Dean Briggs in one simple sentence:

"It was this warmth of spirit which resulted in such vast accumulations of renown and affection that to many he seems more like a legend than a man who took his departure only one morning last spring."

The Social Ferment of Today (Continued)

By Rev. Arthur Lee Kinsolving

I cannot believe that this modern ferment is just an economic dispute. Somehow I feel that there is a rising tide of hope in millions of human breasts, that at last the time has come for an emancipation from servility, from the enforced feeling of inferiority, from the humiliation of being in a hopeless or helpless state.

I believe that human beings really do not want what they appear to want—just a plethora of possessions, but they crave the right to live in dignity, to hold up their heads, to have a reasonable opportunity for the raising of their families and the living of their lives with some sense of decency.

The Church should see in this a tremendous opportunity, for looking back in history, was it not Jesus the Christ who first emphasized the sacredness of every human being's personality?

Not the theory, but the fact of human brotherhood, He insisted upon.

We cannot be content forever to postpone the recognition that there is some grave conflict between Jesus' attitude toward humanity and class feeling.

And I further suggest three attitudes which seem to me dictated by the spirit of Christ.

First, let us believe in humility, but not in humiliation. Let us believe in service, but not in servility. Humility is important.

We rightly deplore the attitude of those with no inner richness of being, who strut about the face of the earth, bellowing: "I'm as good as you are!"

Humility is becoming in a king; it is all-important to the person of average endowment. We believe in humility, but we ought not to believe in humiliation or in servility.

The opportunity in this situation is to give a better break to the great majority of human beings, and to free them from that inferiority complex which has ever been damaging to the human spirit, and is indeed an ancient wrong.

Secondly, let us say that tolerance is not enough—it must be brotherhood.

Our religious leaders of the past generation urged tolerance, because at that time it was a long step nearer the view of Christ than that which was commonly felt by those of privilege.

But as we search the New Testament we find that that was not in Christ's mind. None of us want to be tolerated.

To tolerate people of other races and creeds and classes is still to nourish an opinion that you are essentially superior to them.

Brotherhood goes beyond that. Dr. Albert Dieffenbach has said that it is a true sign that the world has moved forward that the old slogan, "Tolerance," is left behind, and that brotherhood is the hope of the present day.

And lastly, may I say that however we value property rights, and they have their place, we should put persons always and everywhere ahead of property, human values ahead of property values, if we are followers of Jesus.

He placed the highest value on earth on the human being, his hopes and his life.

As we can weave these attitudes into the very spirit of our living, it seems to me that we serve the present age, with all its tremendous needs, and we turn these days of man's importunity into days of God's opportunity.

ADVICE on LOVE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX and NELL BRINKLEY

Parents Who Refuse To Consent Cause Much Trouble

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

PARENTS who do their best to break up love affairs are the cause of many of my readers' troubles.

Which is perhaps somewhat surprising in these modern days. Such is the case in the following letter:

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

"I am 24 years of age, and some two years ago met and fell in love with a man eleven years my senior.

"This man wanted to marry me last year, but due to the fact that he has a sister who is 21 years old and who is unmarried his mother and father have forbidden his marrying before she does. In fact, I believe his mother must have made some dreadful threat, because soon after she spoke to him he suffered ill health—and eventually it led to our breaking up.

"Our love has not diminished, however, and for the past three months we have started seeing one another on the sly. However, we can't go on like this forever, and I am at a loss—since I hate giving him up, and don't want to continue this relationship without our folks knowing about it.

"E. S."

Can it be possible that "any" young man would let an obstacle of this kind stand in the way of his marrying a girl with whom he is very much in love? Especially, a man 35 years of age. This seems almost inexcusable.

Can it be that he is only inventing this as a pretext—or has his family overpowered him to such an extent that his soul is not his own?

I should advise these two to marry in spite of everything, if they so desire. They are both of responsible age.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

About a year ago I met a gentleman several years older than I am, in the business office where I was employed. I fell deeply in love with him, and he took me out a good deal and also seemed to think a lot of me, although he never said so.

Suddenly he stopped calling, and I hadn't heard from him for about five months until lately, when he started coming over about once a week. He is very attentive to me, likes to run around and have a good time, while I am just opposite. I like to spend evenings at home.

Do you think he can really care for me, or would it be better if I started going out more? I think so much of him that I would do anything to win his love.

ANXIOUS.

You seem to be of the serious type, while he is not. He seems to avoid committing himself, and you don't know how much he thinks of you. If you're going to let this affair bother you so much to make you suffer, will it pay? Will you be happy or unhappy? That's the question.

Try to take this friendship more lightly and get the sweet instead of the bitter. But if you're going to be unhappy, what is there in it for you with a man who, from what you tell me, is a good deal of a wanderer?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Jack is so good-looking that he has been thoroughly spoiled by all the girls of his acquaintance. I sent him a box of home-made candy for a valentine. He knew it came from me, because I'm the only one who makes that kind of candy, but he never acknowledged it. Should I get "mad" with him about this?

BAB.

You will be giving your hand away, my dear, if you get "mad" with this young man for not acknowledging the box of candy. A good dose of indifference might work better than a box of sweets, since you tell me all the girls spoil him.

CASUAL AIR GONE FROM EVENING MODE

Intricate Drapery and Detail Seen at Ritz Showing

By ANNICE BRINK
Fashion Editor

Life is getting much more complicated in the fashion world. It seems that the time when any little version of the shirtwaist frock will do from daytime till daytime again has gone. For Grecian lines, 1914 intricacy of cut, and 1912 lavishness with the frou idea have arrived in Boston for evening dazzlement.

Not that the shirtwaist—in its place—is scorned. For one of the most popular frocks modeled at the Ritz, an Easter Parade of fashion, this week, was a simple putty-gray shirtwaist frock of sheer wool, touched with tulip red at belt, worn with a matching red hat.

But for sheer daring, innovations and excitement, this fashion showing exceeded all others so far—a constant hum of admiration rose, and the models themselves, some of society's most charming matrons and debs, were thoroughly thrilled about the clothes they wore.

Shirring, and Grecian lines, and Victorian turkey red caused excitement in the evening group.

An emerald green chiffon had a bodice completely shirred, the shirring extending five inches below the normal waist line, providing a frou of fullness starting downward from mid-hip. This was the silhouette that threw spectators at fashion showings at Paris recently into hysterical applause.

A white gown of silk jersey—dull and supple, without a gleam or glint—was draped on Grecian lines. The fabric lent itself beautifully to statue-like folds. Long, straight lines of shoulder drapery fell to the floor, but were caught at elbow and wrist, to make open-at-the-top sleeves. The skirt, narrow and straight in back, was brought forward in a group of pleats at center front. A silver girdle gave the effect of holding the drapery gathered in front.

Schiaparelli was represented by her leg o' mutton sleeves in a dusty brown taffeta printed with a tie-silk pattern.

Boulanger sponsored a turkey red taffeta emblazoned with gold plaid. Its feature was an involved off-to-one-side train that descender crosswise from the left-side back in a series of loops to trail off at the right-side back. Interesting—and if you sentimentalize about pre-war times, you might like it. Otherwise probably not!

TRY Anchovy SAUCE ON Codfish

By MARTHA LEE

IN THE olden days sauces were such an important food that sauce makers were licensed and sold their wares to royalty and townsmen. For it is said that sauces covered up a multitude of defects in the meats and fish that were served.

Their popularity today, however, does not depend upon this fact—we use them to complement flavors of other foods and to make them more valuable as far as nutritive content is concerned.

If any department of cookery is an art, surely it is this of making sauces. They should be smooth and perfectly blended with just the seasoning to add the right touch.

White sauce is served too frequently on our tables.

Why not add some curry powder to white sauce when serving it with shrimp or hard boiled eggs, cut in eighths for an egg sauce for fish? Chopped parsley is also a tasteful addition. To make a flavorful accompaniment for boiled cod fish, try this Anchovy Sauce.

ANCHOVY SAUCE

Prepare one cup of rich cream sauce (use no salt in the seasoning), and when hot stir in one teaspoon of anchovy paste, one chopped hard cooked egg, one tablespoon of minced parsley and a teaspoon of French mustard. Cook the sauce in a double boiler until very smooth, and just before serving add a few drops of lemon juice and one tablespoon of Worcestershire sauce.

HIGH SCHOOL TRAGEDY

Detective's Bad Blunder

CHAPTER XVIII

That knocked the pins right out from under all of us, so to speak. I don't know which of us three—Dad, Mother, or myself—felt the worst. I guess it was Dad, for Mother was inclined to retain a blind faith in the "boy," and I was more or less prepared for something to happen.

Dad was a hard-headed lawyer who had given his own word for the man's good faith, and he certainly had been let down, even taking the letter at its face value.

He was talking to the Inspector, it turned out, when we came in. Of course, he reported the letter to him immediately. O'Brien was getting to work at once. Dad sat around waiting for the telephone to ring.

"I can't believe he'd run away," Mother repeated over and over. "You will find it just as he says, he has to go for some reason. When his business is completed, he will come back."

"No doubt," said Dad sarcastically. "The only trouble is that his business is probably in a foreign country and will detain him for some 10 years!"

I was too busy adjusting my own ideas to say anything.

Finally the telephone rang. Dad jumped at it.

"Hello, hello! Yes, this is he . . . Yes, yes . . . He did? Why didn't he follow him? . . . I don't blame you. . . In a blue car with three others? . . . Of course, yes, yes . . . Let me know at once, won't you?"

This conversation was not very enlightening. During it, Allen had come in and Mother had told him what we already knew. He was awfully excited. When Dad turned away from the telephone, we all just looked at him. He ran his hand over his head and slumped into his chair.

"O'Brien has had a report from San Francisco. The man who was supposed to be shadowing Bruce called him up to tell him he had seen Bruce drive out of town, taking the ferry to Sausalito."

"Where was he?"

"He was phoning from a booth at the ferry slip for further instructions while Bruce drove on the boat and sailed away."

"How dumb!"

Detective's Mistake

"O'Brien is cussing a blue streak. I'm afraid the fellow is in line for walking a beat again. Anyway, O'Brien has teletyped ahead to watch all roads leading north. Of course, they may be picked up when they leave the boat at Sausalito."

"They?" questioned Allen.

"He is accompanied by another man and two women."

"One of them a blonde," I whispered to myself.

"Dad looked at me quickly, but he didn't take me up on it then.

"They are traveling in a blue sedan, evidently trying to make the Canadian border. Seems strange they would go so far to get out of the country when it is so much shorter to Mexico. They must have some good reason."

Allen was flushed, excited, nervously pacing up and down.

"There, you see!" he exclaimed, "I've been right about him all along. He's a bounder, a traitor! You'll see. He'll turn out to be the one who murdered her . . . the sweetest, kindest, prettiest girl in all the world!"

The last words were a shriek. As he yelled them at us, Allen ran from the room, tears coursing down his cheeks.

"Well!" ejaculated Dad.

My father was really to be pitied the next few days. Of course, the police did not suspect him of any complicity in getting Bruce away, but naturally he was in a ticklish situation.

Sunday morning the papers spread the news of Bruce's "escape" across the front page. They ran Bruce's pictures again, and one of my father. And they had some news beyond what we had been told the night before.

Bruce was pretty fortunate in getting away. The dumb detective had given him a grand opportunity. The fellow really had good intentions. He arrived at the Golden Gate Ferry slip just as Bruce drove on and they began to take up the gangplank, or whatever they call it.

Checking the Inn

Of course, he could have shown his star and demanded to be allowed on the same boat. They would just have to hold it. But instead of doing that, he thought it would be safer to call O'Brien for instructions before following Bruce.

So, knowing the boat would not arrive at Sausalito for 20 minutes, and that a car once on would have to stay, he stopped at the wharf to phone St. Joseph.

Ordinarily, it might have worked. He would have got O'Brien in five minutes, O'Brien would have telephoned Sausalito, and Bruce would have been picked up as he left the boat. But luck was against the poor detective.

Two other people had missed the boat and were using the phones to tell their friends so. Again the detective did not use his authority, but waited patiently, confident he had lot of time.

When he did get the phone, connections were bad and the call was a long time going through. O'Brien himself wasted some precious time bawling the man out. So Bruce and his companions left the ferry unquestioned and proceeded northward. It was just a matter of luck.

After that, however, Bruce must have been clever, for his car was not picked up until it reached Ukiah, a matter of several hours. A constable there halted it, but Bruce was no longer driving; in fact he and his woman companion had disappeared.

Only a man and woman were left. At first, they professed ignorance of Bruce Lloyd. It developed that they did know him under his right name. They lived in the apartment house where Bernice Carter lived and had been invited to join her and her friend for a trip. They themselves were anxious to go to Eureka where the woman's folks lived. So they accepted the invitation.

On the way, Bernice had become ill. They stopped at an isolated inn on the highway, where she was to stay until evening. Bruce insisted that the couple continue on their way in his car.

As the papers went to press, authorities were investigating the bus line, but as yet had gleaned no results.

"A hardened criminal could have done no better in making an escape," commented Allen, who was apparently more calm.

Dad shook his head. "You are right. I cannot understand it. I was certainly taken in by him. 'No fool like an old fool!' but I'm not so sure that he is guilty yet. We do not know who this woman is. Perhaps she is someone he feels he must protect. Yet, as far as I am concerned, she makes it worse."

I was thinking. I am afraid had I expressed my thoughts, they would have been as bitter as Dad's. I was not convinced that Bruce had shot Connie, but he had certainly sold us all down the river.

Dad went to telephone O'Brien. When he came back, he had no further news of Bruce, but he did have some on the other angles.

"O'Brien is pretty sure that the murderer is travelling north with a blonde woman; in other words, he is almost ready to pronounce Lloyd guilty."

"If he does, will you take the case?" asked Mother.

"No."

We were all surprised; in spite of the events, for that meant Dad, too, was convinced of Lloyd's guilt.

Woman Is Held

He dropped the subject. "The Inspector had some other news that will interest the children. Their 'pal' Melvin, has been released!"

"Released!" I exclaimed. "Why, I thought the police had as much on him as anyone." Then I stopped, for after all, my family didn't know yet that I was in Inspector O'Brien's confidence.

"I suppose they have," answered Dad, "but the police cannot get him to talk; so they are going to follow him, in the hopes of getting something on his companions, or at least finding out why he had the gun that night."

"He might get away, like Bruce."

Dad shrugged. He looked tired. He had taken this thing awfully hard.

"What else?" I questioned.

"Carrington went to San Diego Saturday morning, accompanied by his shadow, a man who is more reliable than Lloyd's was, evidently. He went to the hotel Mrs. Carrington had phoned from, and found, like the police, that she had flown. He was as puzzled as they, it seemed. But not so resourceless."

"What did he do?"

"He began phoning their acquaintances and friends and found her stopping with a couple they knew. He went out there in a taxi, followed by the detective in another."

"And did they get her?"

"Yes."

"What did she have to say?"

"She refused to talk without a lawyer."

"What will they do with her?"

"They are returning her here to be questioned."

Adele Garrison's Love Serial

Given in Marriage

CHAPTER 312

I HALTED abruptly at sight of the divisions of the bicycle tire tracks at the junction of the woodland paths.

One small bicycle, following a larger one, had gone straight ahead; the other, trailing the second of the large bicycles, had turned to the right.

This meant that Junior had parted company with Roderick and that each small boy was alone in his great adventure.

I had no means of determining whether my own little son or his cousin had turned to the right.

But another look at the path showed me that Major Grantland and Jim had followed the main trail, so unhesitatingly I turned to the right.

It seemed interminable, that right hand path, with only the prints of the large and small tires to guide my way. But when, after leading me directly to the right for a while, it began to circle left again, and I realized that it was simply a spur of the main path, in all probability made by berry pickers, I began to take heart again.

And when I emerged upon the main path and saw again the tracks of the four bicycles, together with the footprints of Hugh Grantland and Jim, my fears unaccountably began to lessen.

But they roused again, and to a high pitch when a little further on I almost stumbled over the two small bicycles, lying one upon either side of the trail, their handle bars and wheels almost hidden by the vines into which they had been thrown.

Terror again gripped me as I hurried on, so heedless of obstacles that, at a sudden turn in the path, I stumbled against two motionless figures standing together in its narrow confines and realized, as my hands went blindly out to save me and caught at a masculine coat sleeve, that I was clinging to Hugh Grantland's arm.

But there was no welcome in Hugh Grantland's eyes as he saw who it was that clutched him.

They were dark with anger, and the gripping hand he put upon my arm as he swung to face me was anything but tender.

"I never would have believed you would do this," he said, his voice grim and bitter. "Always I have trusted you. I thought your word was your bond, therefore I did not tie you up, as I had threatened."

"Have you found any trace of the boys?"

He shook his head.

HEAVEN HIGH--HELL DEEP

Nightmare Crash—Back to Reality

By NORMAN ARCHIBALD

Six months after the United States declared war I was one of the lucky ones ordered abroad. At Issoudun, without any previous training, I started learning to fly the Neiports, the fastest and most dangerous of war planes. We talked, dreamed flying night and day. A test pilot was killed, but his death didn"t cool my love for flying. Then suddenly Beauchamp and I were ordered to report to the First Pursuit Group. I was assigned to a beautiful new plane, a Spad. I saw a German pilot captured. Ordered out to fly low and fire into the enemy's trenches my friend, Beauchamp, was killed. I was heartbroken . . . Bill Russell, a daring flier, who was always getting scolded for leaving the formation and flying by himself, is shot down. Our next assignment was to shoot down the observation balloons.

Two balloons were attacked on September 6 and another on September 7, but all attacks were without results. Failure was due probably to two reasons: Lack of balloon guns and not enough incendiary ammunition in the bursts.

Mitchell, Avery and I wanted to get a balloon.

Mitchell led, Avery flew right, I flew left; we sighted an enemy sausage and maneuvered for attack.

Mitchell dove first, poured a stream of bullets into the balloon and swerved away through wisps of dirty smoke.

We waited. Instead of bursting into flames it floated lazily, defiantly, and as if inviting attack.

Avery hovered protection and as I swooped down, firing into the large, round surface, the German ground crew set off their flowerpots. A split second I was caught in a flaming tower of fire studded with burning missiles.

Could I get out? Must get out! Taking a deep breath I gouged into an orange sea where ugly reptiles straddling red-capped waves, stuck out their forked metal tongues—and came out! Whee! Made it! Now to see the burning balloon! Fat, sleek, secure, it was floating like a swollen porpoise. Mortified and unable to find Avery or Mitchell I flew home.

"That was a swell expedition!" said Avery as we walked to dinner.

"What are their damned sausages made of—asbestos? I certainly fired."

"Now, Archie," laughed Avery, "you must go close when you fire. You opened up too far away."

"Far away, hell! I was almost inside her."

Mystery Flight

Certain personal flights at this sector are vivid. I remember distinctly flying between our aerodrome and the lines, over St. Mihiel, the Meuse river and other adjacent Front landmarks to familiarize myself with new territory.

Also I remember high patrols, the balloon expedition and flights over German territory for combat work.

Hazy or clear they are before me. But one flight remains a mystery.

I do not remember leaving the aerodrome. I do not know in what kind of flight, under what orders, or where I was bound for. I have no recollection whatsoever of where or when I crashed or where I tried to land. All that is a complete blank.

Whatever happened so stunned me that it wiped from my conscious mind everything relative to the uncanny experience itself and even robbed my memory of days previous.

Horrible to me then, it is even more horrible now, for to rack your brain for years, to comb your very soul for an elusive something that will not be prodded out, to think, think, think without results, until your brain cells hurt and then admit to yourself that you have been so shocked you can never recover what is your own, is distracting and, at times, harrowing. I can tell only what little I know.

Reason Returns

As one who suddenly awakens from a nightmare, trembling, but unable to recall his frightening dreams . . . I awoke. Night. Pitch black. Groping my way through a narrow, twisting street I stumbled and fell.

My head buzzed; my legs ached; my back hurt and rolling over I got up, shaking. Where was I? Why was I here?

My eyes burned; I had stumbled. My God! was it really night or was I blind?

Turned to stone, I stood . . . thinking. Outlines . . . faint . . . small houses took shape . . . I could see. Houses? Then this is a town—but, what town?

My thoughts swirled but would not take form. Swirling, swirling, they chased round and round in my head as, mightily, I tried to think, to remember, to catch something in this chaos of nothing.

What was the matter with me? Something strange had happened, very strange. I would not have it—I would remember. Somehow, I must think. Some way I would make sense.

Like a wild man I pounded my fists into my throbbing temples.

Now—I would start from the very, very beginning. Well, I am Jim Archibald. My address is 1206 Marion street, Seattle, Washington, and that's . . . right. Go on—what else? . . . Oh, God, I can't . . . go on, I can't remember . . . anything else. Yes you can, think! Why did you leave Seattle? Why? . . . Why? . . . Oh! the war. My plane—my squadron—must get back to the squadron. The patrol . . . when was the patrol? Today? Yesterday? What patrol? What day is today? What day was yesterday? Have I crashed and lost my senses? Nonsense, the rest will come . . . by and by. But must get back to the squadron; maybe they need me for a patrol. Must find . . . someone . . . and, aimlessly, I plodded over cobblestones.

Not a light. Not a sound. Is it evening, midnight, or just before dawn?

A curve; a mass, something blocked the road, and edging around, I saw before me stark, naked ruins. Deserted houses in deserted streets. One-eyed windows glared at me; empty doorways stared at me disheveled gardens watched me pass and the streets, vacant, crooked, black, called not for strange company. Same old story—this place has been shelled. I'm near the Front.

A Friend

One little stone house stood intact, alone, dark and with shutters tightly drawn. Someone might possibly be in there, and walking up three steps I rapped on the door. No one came. Chilly . . my head was cold . . . where in hell was my cap? Suddenly nauseated, I sat down on the top step.

What was that? . . . someone in the house? Getting up I pounded with my fists, pounded, pounded—then again, exhausted, sat down. A crack of light. The door open . . . stealthily.

"C'est moi!" I cried.

"C'est vous?" came a voice.

"Oui, oui, un aviateur Americain, et je pense . . . je crois que je suis egare."

The crack widened and an old Frenchmen, in long woolen drawers and a white undershirt, stood in the doorway holding a kerosene lamp above his gray tousled head.

"Aviateur Americain?" he questioned with suspicion. So standing up, I pointed to the wings on my tunic.

"Egare oui!" he nodded, "mais vous etes tres malade aussi, n'est-ce pas?"

"Non, non. Pas malade, Monsier, mais il faut que je rentre . . . " and the whole of me was slipping into warm space.

* * *

Wind — Wind! — it slapped against my face. Revived and wrapped in a strange coat, I sat in—something which was speeding close to the ground. What kind of a contraption is this?

My brain churned. Chug-Chug-Whr-r-r-r. A dot of yellow light ahead jiggled as it hit the earth and now and then a bit of green. Chug-Chug-Whir-r-r-r. A motorcycle is chasing me!

Turning, to look behind, I saw a man close beside me. His body was bent over handle bars; his face intent on the road—I was in the side car of a motorcycle!

Now—what has happened? Who is driving me? Where in the devil is he taking me? I'll ask him.

We hit a bump. Sharp pains shot through my body and I could not speak. "Sacrebleu!" Cursing under his breath he slowed down. So—a Frenchman is driving me, and, feeling secure and protected, I thought of the old man and his lamp.

He told me I was sick. "Malade," he said. "Vous etes malade.' But then what? . . . that was the last I remembered. Probably he was right. I did feel sort of queer and drowsy, and, patching this and that together, decided I must have fainted; the kindly old man had taken care of me, read my identification tag and found someone, a soldier no doubt, to return me to my squadron. But . . . what filled in the interim? Unconscious, until a moment ago . . . did this happen tonight . . . or had I been ill somewhere for weeks? Fainted? Merely my own idea, and even so, would they bundle up a limp body and immediately stuff it into the sidecar?

Back to the Squadron

Maybe, unable to revive me, they were sending me to a hospital! Doubtful, wary and fearful of my destination, in this jumble of conjectures, I questioned.

"Ou est ce que nous allons?—il faut que je—"

"Comment?" He slowed up. "I speak the English."

"Where are we going?" I yelled. "I've got to get back to—"

"Oui, oui, I take you to the aerodrome. That is very excellent, n'est-ce pas? Restez tranquille—be good—we hurry now, voila!" and speeding up his engine we bumped along.

He is taking me to my squadron! He is taking me back to the aerodrome!

Happy to the point of delirium I wanted to scream; to shout; to tell the trees, the bobbing lights; the black sky and the one far-away star: "I am going back to my squadron."

Along . . . along . . . is it far from here?

How long have we been riding? Bolt upright I sat to watch the road. How well I felt! What a glorious ride! What people, these French, what kindness and understanding! I would remember this man; send him a present some day; yes, and the old ones, too. Never would I forget them . . . never.

Chill Welcome

Light inside the tent. A radiant welcome, for it meant that other pilots were awake. Glowing with the pleasure of a belated homecoming; eager to see my comrades and hear the news; I quickened my steps.

There they were . . . talking . . . undressing . . . arranging their cots for the night. The joy that flowed through my veins! Taking a deep breath, I walked in. The indescribable happiness!

"Hello!" I said—beaming.

"Archie! Look! It's Archie!"

"God Almighty! It is—Why, Archy!"

"Well, I'll be damned! And where have you been, Rip Van Winkle?"

Their words hurt. The curt, half-finished ejaculations and would-be humorous sentences curdled my blood.

Were these my friends, these men who stared at me with vacant faces? Was this my longed-for greeting?

No one rushed up. No one whacked me on the back. No one grasped my hand or asked a question. Like a stranger, unexpected and unwanted, I walked stiffly down the tent aisle.

My cot was gone.

My blankets and flying equipment were missing.

My trunk open, was stripped bare. All my clothes had disappeared and not a vestige of a personal belonging was in sight.

I stood, hollow.

No one spoke. Wheeling around, flushed and angry, I shouted, "Where's my cot? . . . Who opened my trunk? . . . who in Hell took my clothes? Bring them back, I tell you . . . Bring them back this minute."

KANE'S OPENS BIGGEST SALE

Optimistic over the trend of business during the first three months in 1935, Kane's Furniture Co. formally opened the greatest sale in its history.

Harry Kane, president of the company, predicted this sale would be the greatest in the history of these stores. He said:

"We have been preparing for this sale for months, and Kane buyers have been searching the furniture marts for unusual values to offer at the eight Kane stores in the Boston shopping area.

"We have put more time and effort into this sale than any other event in our history.

"We are determined to make Kane Days the outstanding sales event in our entire experience. We made many fortunate purchases at low prices and we mean to pass the savings on to our customers. We may never be able to offer bargains like these again, but if outstanding value-giving means anything, and we know that it does, Kane Days will be record-breaking ones.

"Kane Days bargains will be on sale all day Saturday, 9 a. m. to 9 p. m."

Kane furniture stores are located in Boston, Cambridge, Waltham, Hyde Park, Malden, Framingham, Quincy and Taunton.

AMERICAN 'SPY' BEARS MARKS OF NAZI JAIL

By Universal Service

Berlin, April 6—Emaciated by long months in prison, Richard Roiderer, naturalized American, on his arrival here was lodged in Moabit prison to await trial for espionage.

The trial will begin April 12 before the people's court which has power to impose the death sentence. Roiderer had been in a Munich jail since last June.

Roiderer was dejected. He had a blood clot on his nose and a black eye. He carried his belongings in a suitcase and a cardboard box. He did not attempt to talk.

GOT MARKS RECENTLY

The prisoner apparently got the marks on his face recently.

Roiderer was whisked by taxi cab through a blinding snowstorm from the Anhalter railroad station to Moabit, the same prison where Isabel Steele, another naturalized American, was recently held on charges of espionage.

She was released after months of imprisonment and deported to the United States.

Until their execution by the headsman, Baroness von Berg and Frau von Natzmer, German aristocrats who were convicted of espionage, were also inmates of Moabit.

Simultaneously with the arrival of Roiderer, grave differences between the American and German governments, as to whether Nazi authorities may try American citizens in secret, appeared to be coming to a head.

INSIST ON FAIR TRIAL

Washington, through Consul-General Geist, insists on having an American representative present throughout the trial.

American authorities feel that, if they are not allowed to see that Roiderer gets a fair trial, this will establish a precedent in Germany which would result in secret trials of other Americans who might be charged with espionage.

The American consulate after some insistence expects a definite decision by Monday.

Roiderer is supposed to be charged with military espionage, but, as far as American officials know, he is only accused of having reported that Storm Troops in Munich were armed with rifles—a fact reported by many newspapermen.

Roiderer formerly lived in Cleveland. He returned to Germany to visit his mother and was arrested while crossing the Swiss frontier.

WOUNDED VETS LAUD HEARST

By Universal Service

Chicago, April 6—Bearing signatures of 364 disabled veterans at the Edward Hines, Jr., Memorial Hospital, a round-robin letter was forwarded today to William Randolph Hearst, thanking him for his support of the movement for immediate cash payment of the bonus.

Recent editorials, written and published by Mr. Hearst, have stressed the point that in the present vast program of federal spending for relief purposes it would be the worst sort of injustice and ingratitude to exclude the former soldier from the benefits.

Many veterans at the hospital are still suffering from unhealing wounds which they brought home from the Western Front.

Others are confined to their beds with diseases which came to them in the service of their country.

The round-robin letter was kept moving from bed to bed until the signatures had been obtained.

FALL RIVER School Mix Ends

Fall River, April 6—Controversy over the proposed appointment of Mrs. Kathryn M. Murphy to the position as a teacher in Henry Lord junior high being held by Miss Elizabeth G. O'Neil appeared at an end today.

Without any explanation, Mrs. Murphy tendered her resignation. Miss O'Neil would have been demoted to the grades under the proposed change.

AUSTEN LAKE on

Latest Chapter of Massachusetts' Race Melodrama

BEING SOMEWHAT BEFUDDLED by the tortuous twists of the state's horse track riddle, I am no longer sure that the simple sum of 2 plus 2 makes 4 any more.

Austen Lake

Maybe there are some bright scholars among the voters who legalized the Massachusetts pari-mutuel bill last November who can total the following figures of speech and reach a satisfactory answer.

Item 1—A writ of mandamus has just been filed for a certain Irving A. Tebo, minor Boston bank employe, with the Supreme Court.

The writ asks the court's decision on whether the State Horse Bill, which reads that no race track shall be built "within 50 miles of another race track," applies to the shorter distance between East Boston's proposed site and those of Narragansett and Rockingham, or whether it refers only to tracks within the state limit.

Meanwhile, until the court decides on next Tuesday, the state race board refuses to issue a charter.

Item 2—Mr. Tebo, represented by a lawyer named J. Arnold Farrer with offices at 6 Beacon street, who is drafting the writ, explains he is serving a conscientious client, who stands for the plain people's right.

Item 3—Attorney Farrer shares an office suite, having an interjoining door, with a lawyer named A. Ingham Bicknell, who handles considerable legal detail for Walter O'Hara.

Item 4—Walter O'Hara is the Narragansett horse track operator, which draws much of its patronage from the Greater Boston area.

As I say, I am pretty dull at figures. So, will some smart pupil rise and tell me whether those items total to 4?

* * *

Subs for the Varsity Star

NOW, SCHOLARS, IT HAPPENS that Plain Citizen Tebo has been warned by his bank boss that the firm's good will is involved by his independent action and would he please withdraw.

But Attorney Farrer tells me, if Mr. Tebo retires, there will be plenty of other plain citizens to stand as emergency god-fathers to the writ, and particularly a certain parson.

"I drafted this writ," said Mr. Farrer, who is a jolly little Santa Claus type, "at Mr. Tebo's desire, because he was concerned about the public's rights and wished to protect them."

"Protect them against what?" inquired your snooper.

"Well——," said Mr. Farrer, making his mouth into a speculative pucker and trailing off his voice.

Q—Now Mr. Farrer, do you and your office mate, Mr. Bicknell, collaborate in law cases?

A—Well, occasionally, yes!

Now, scholars, let me make it plain! I do not mean even remotely to imply that just because Mr. Bicknell happens to have an adjoining office to Mr. Farrer in the same suite, where he studies Walter O'Hara's legal problems, that there is any shadow of neighborly interest in Mr. Tebo's writ.

No Siree! That is just a curious circumstantial coincidence.

Particularly, as Mr. O'Hara, from Washington, stated over the long-distance telephone that he was not concerned about the writ.

Commission is Bewitched

MEANWHILE, IN ITS COZY, airy offices atop the Ford Building on Beacon Hill, the race board and its force of dapper clerks is gathering cobwebs while waiting for things to stop happening.

Having been fairly handcuffed by the big bad mandamus, Charley Conners, as boss commissioner, just won't talk about horse racing or charters or promoters. The Attorney-General's office told him not to talk until the court has reviewed the writ of mandamus and issued its opinion.

And Charley, being a good soldier, is standing at attention, eyes front and thumbs to his trouser seams.

Also meanwhile, the state's budget of spending for the fiscal year is likewise standing at attention.

There is an $800,000 allotment that is supposed to be derived from pari-mutuel taxation. And since the state cannot spend what it may not get, the whole budget is frozen stiff.

And again, meanwhile, the horse track promoters, who have been wishful to start building their plant before snow-fly, are dizzy from swivelling their necks to follow the twists and swoops of the situation.

And the public . . . but la! la! scholars, who gives a tinker's cuss about the public?

* * *

Springfield Crashes the Gate

NOW, IN THIS BREATHING interval, an entirely new horse plant group has mushroomed up in Springfield to add its application to the three surviving petitioners, East Boston, Framingham and Norwood.

This is curious, since the public hearings of last Tuesday and Wednesday were advertized as Hearings to end all future Hearings.

And now, the commission must, to be perfectly Christian, call another birthday party in honor of Springfield and invite in the neighbors' children all over again.

Which, after the court rules on the "50 mile," writ, if it rules favorably, may mean a further delay.

All this is more wonderful than Wonderland, and as Alice told the Walrus, "Things get curiouser and curiouser."

I trust that this is not a sample of the way the Beacon Hill statesmen handle the people's household business in other matters.

You don't think that possible, do you scholars?

JONES, DUTRA PLAY IN HEAVY RAIN

BULLETIN

Augusta, Ga, April 6 (AP)—Bob Jones failed to make up for lost ground today by taking a 37, one over par, for the outgoing nine of histhirdround. Olin Dutra was out in 36.

By Associated Press

Augusta, Ga., April 6—Trailing the pace-setting Henry Picard 11 strokes, Bob Jones teed off with Olin Dutra, national open champion, in a driving rainstorm today for the third round in the Augusta National Golf Club's $5000 invitation tournament.

Conditions became increasingly worse. It was blowing a half-gale, but a gallery of several hundred trekked off in pursuit of Jones and Dutra, who started with 146 and 140, respectively.

Victor Ghezzi of Deal, N. J., and Byron Nelson, 23-year-old Texas professional, overcame the windy hazards of the rain-soaked course today with sub-par performances.

Ghezzi carded a 33, three under par to improve the position he had with 144 for the first 36 holes.

Nelson, who missed a hole-in-one on the 185-yard sixth only by an inch, shot the outgoing nine in 34. He had 145 at the half-way mark.

Meanwhile Johnny Dawson, the Chicago "businessman amateur," finished his third round with a par 72 despite three-putting four greens. His 54 hole total of 219 gave him temporary lead.

Johnny Revolta, Milwaukee professional, rallied on the home stretch for a sub par 35. This gave him 73 for his third round, a 54 hole total of 217 and displaced Dawson.

Willie Goggin of San Francisco dropped back with a 78, ten shots over his first round, and posted a total of 220.

Bobby Cruickshank missed a chance to beat par for the outgoing nine by failing to carry the ninth green with his approach. He carded a 36 after starting the day with 146 for 36 holes, on the same level with Bob Jones.

Brouillard

Offered Three Paris Bouts

Lou Brouillard, former world's welter and middle weight champion, received an offer today from Paris for three bouts. One of which was to be with the French sensation, Marcel Phil, in Paris on June 10. Two more bouts are lined up against English opponents.

It is understood that Jack McAvoy will be one of the two.

Brouillard has just returned from a most successful campaign of the West coast, winning every bout he fought, and causing the West coast sensation, "Young" Corbett, to refuse to enter the same ring.

RED SOX

Tangle With BIRMINGHAM

By Bill Grimes

Birmingham, Ala., April 6—After an all night ride to cover less than 170 miles, the Red Sox rolled out of their sleepers here early this morning to play a two-game series with the Barons.

"Lefty" Grove used rare judgment when he refused to bear down in Atlanta, for the weather was raw and rain fell during most of the afternoon.

Grove was nicked for six hits and four runs in two innings and issued four walks.

But think nothing of it, for Mose did not attempt to put any stuff on the ball, realizing he would not benefit by letting out because of the inclement weather.

After Grove had put the Crackers in a hitting mood, Long Joe Mulligan was assigned to stop them. This he did in fine style, despite the fact that he was pitching a slippery ball.

Moreover, Joe's single played an important part in the scoring of the second Sox run.

Manager Joe Cronin gave Al Schacht his varsity letter, sending him in to replace Mulligan. For the two rounds, he was on the mound, Al held the Crackers hitless and only one man reached first.

"Dusty" Rhodes was to work for the Sox today and Johnny Welch tomorrow. After which we are homeward bound.

Braves Future Bleak; Team Entirely Veteran

MUST DIG UP NEW MEN OR SINK

By Joe Cashman

Norfolk, Va., April 6—Rookies climbing in and out of upper berths on this trip homeward are a constant reminder that the Braves are in need of more minor league connections.

Since giving up the Harrisburg farm, the Tribe is linked with the bushes only by a working agreement with the Albany club of the International League.

That's better than nothing. But not much better.

Few, if any, of the young Warriors are ready yet for Double A ball, and Albany does business with too many other clubs in the majors to be counted on to furnish the Braves much in the way of valuable new talent.

The problem of where to develop his kids and look for promising young blood consequently is causing Bill McKechnie many a headache.

ALL OVER 30

And Babe Ruth, if he expects to be pilot next year, should be even more concerned over the situation.

The Tribe that has finished fourth the past two seasons is getting no better.

Pitching, which has been largely responsible for what success the team has attained, is furnished by ancients whose average age is 33. Bobby Brown is the only flinger under 30. Betts and Smith are 37, Mangum 35, and Cantwell 33.

The average age of the 23 players most likely to be retained is approximately 30 years, probably the highest in either major league.

Every regular figures to have passed his peak in effectiveness except Berger, Lee, Jordan and Brown.

The outfit as it is constituted today may have another first-division year in its system, but it's baseball's safest wager that it hasn't two more.

Ruth will get nowhere and go daffy getting there unless he is provided some capable new hands to replace certain old ones.

PLENTY Open Water at FINISH

VANQUISHED EXHAUSTED

By International News Service

Putney - on - Thames, Eng., April 6—In another retelling of what long ago became an old, old, story, Cambridge again defeated Oxford in the annual boat race between England's leading universities today.

It was the twelfth victory in succession for the light blue, and latest in the seemingly endless string of disappointments for Oxford.

It gave Cambridge a total of 46 victories and left Oxford 40, with possibility of breaking the jinx that has hovered over the latter for more than a decade as far away as ever.

High hopes had been entertained for the Oxford crew this year, for it had been coached by two Cambridge men who put sportsmanship before college loyalty in a desperate effort to find out "what is wrong with Oxford."

There was only one answer that found a ready way to the lips of almost a million watchers.

That was: "Cambridge has a better crew."

Oxford Starts Well

With the heaviest eight ever to sit in a British racing shell, Oxford got away to a good start after losing the toss, but at 200 yards Cambridge had grabbed the lead and never relinquished it.

Past the one-mile and two-mile markers the university crews rowed strongly and well, with Cambridge gradually increasing its lead from a boat length to two and three.

At the three-mile mark, the light blues were four lengths ahead and at Devonshire Meadow six. At Barnes Bridge, start of the last half mile, Oxford had made up a length, but the crew was obviously tired, crushed with disappointment, and the margin had lengthened to six at the White Hart and the Bull's Head.

As on almost every occasion during the past twelve years, Oxford finished exhausted, while Cambridge was comparatively fresh.

As the light blues rested on their oars and drifted across the finish line, four lengths of open water separated the stern of their shell from the defeated prow of Oxford.

Timing officials gave Cambridge an official margin of 4½ lengths at the finish. Cambridge's time was 19 minutes, 40 seconds.

'I'd Do It All Over Again'

Ouimet Glad He Started Life as Caddy, He Says at M. G. A. Service Dinner

"Had I my life to live over, I would want to start in again as a caddy."

It is Francis Ouimet, Boston's No. 1 golfing citizen, talking as guest of the M. G. A. Service Section dinner at Charles River Country Club.

Francis, tanned from southern suns, was presenting to 116 interested golfers and greenskeepers the problem of the caddy.

"The caddy of today is often your leading business man of tomorrow," Ouimet continued. "Eddie Lowery, later state amateur champion, caddied for me when I won the National title back in 1913. He was only 11 then.

"Only recently I heard from Eddie from out west, and he states he is doing great in the advertising field. He is only one of many I could name."

FRANCIS OUIMET

Forty-one member clubs of the M. G. A. were represented and four non-member clubs . . . Charlie Gilman, Wollaston secretary, provided the humor of the party . . . He said if worst came to worst, what with resignations and all, he could always apply for a dog racing franchise . . . and use Linde Fowler as the rabbit.

C. Adrian Sawyer, chairman and secretary of the service section, was toastmaster . . . His keynote was the new type of leadership needed to guide clubs at the present critical state . . .

S. Harold Greene, Charles River president, explained budgets and management and how the two must be successfully wedded . . . and paid particular tribute to greenskeepers "who have in many cases kept the for sale sign off our leading courses."

Charles E. Mason, M. G. A. head, told the assembled how best to make use of their facilities 12 full months a year . . . How they should introduce winter activities, especially attractive to the women . . .

Golf shop and tournaments was the subject of a discourse by Alvah H. Pierce of the Duxbury Yacht Club . . . Linde Fowler stressed the important link between the press and the golf club . . .

Jim McCormack, superintendent of Unicorn, explained the modern trend in greenskeeping. Guy West, chairman of the Massachusetts Greenskeepers' Club, spoke on the relation between the club help and the various committees.

Gross income was down an average of 11 per cent during 1934, stated Chairman Sawyer . . . according to a questionnaire answered by 20 clubs in the state . . . Yet the membership and guest fees at these clubs remained almost stationary . . . He charged the loss to the elimination of initiation fees and suggested their return if clubs were to be run in healthy state.

Mr. Boston

Lewis Hounds Danno

By Jack Conway

AROUND the town with Mr. Boston:

El Rigby, Strangler Lewis' manager, hopping off a New York train at the South Station, and determined to make life miserable for youthful Dan O'Mahoney.

Rigby will be wise if he keeps his Boston address a secret, as some of Danno's admirers are already looking for him. They plan to give him a 24-hour notice to quit town.

Mr. Boston

* * *

Rigby intends to ask the various athletic commissions to bar O'Mahoney until such time as he gives the Strangler a return match. Lewis is in the mid-West, where he is tipping over the opposition.

* * *

O'Mahoney is being attacked from coast to coast, which would indicate he has become a top wrestling attraction. They don't shoot at dead ones.

* * *

The city council is getting ready to go into a huddle and grant the Red Sox a license for Sunday baseball. They should also give Tom Yawkey a medal for having the courage to invest $3,000,000 in Boston baseball during a depression period.

* * *

Leo S. Echle of Somerville bobbing into the sports department from Florida where he has been connected with horse tracks. He is seeking the position in charge of the mutuel department at Suffolk Downs.

HORSES ARRIVE

SERGEANT Eddie Mack on the telephone from Rockingham Park.

"A car load of horses just arrived from Miami?" piped the sergeant.

"How many head in a car load?" I queried.

"Sixteen!"

"Who was aboard?"

"George Knecssi was aboard with Victorium," said Mack. "He also has Lilly Kane coming from Maryland next week.

"Met Colford came with My Purchase, Dancing Lady, Long Count, Apple Fritter and Grey Steel.

"Other horses to arrive in the car were Pambula, Yenoor, Golden Effort, Clap Worth, Lord Autumn, Bottles, Stretch Call, Ukraine, Below Cost and Good Jest."

* * *

Yeah! I'm already studying the form sheets. You will find me in front of the clubhouse at Rockingham on May 15.

* * *

Martin Nathanson will be the presiding steward at Rockingham. Tom Thorpe will also be a steward, while Bob Friend will be the starter.

* * *

A. A. Barroni calling Rockingham from Bay Meadows, Cal., to make arrangements for stable accommodations for his nags.

* * *

There will be $250,000 in purses at the Rockingham meeting.

Walter O'Hara set the pace for other tracks with purses, and they have accepted his challenge.

* * *

McCOY RESTING

AL McCoy, Dorchester middleweight, is taking things easy. He has recovered from the effects of the recent operation on his arm, but will not resume training for several weeks.

* * *

McCoy against Brouillard is the only local match that will draw top money. This bout will net between $12,000 and $15,000.

It will enable Rip Valenti's Goodwin Club to recoup some of its losses. Valenti has carried on with great courage despite the lack of local boxing talent.

* * *

Bud Stotler, on the telephone from Bowie, to tell Lou Smith he will send 18 of the Vanderbilt horses to Rockingham. Stotler is trainer of Discovery.

* * *

Alex MacLean all smiles over the boom his wrestling shows at the Arena have received since Gus Sonnenberg returned here. Alex has the Old Dynamiter blasting away at Charley Strack next Wednesday night, and looks for a capacity crowd.

* * *

"Farmer" George McLeod believes Sonnenberg can win back his old title.

* * *

"Scotty" McDougal will oppose Frank Sexton in the semifinal. In special bouts, Leo LeFevre will oppose John Schaeffer, while Billy Bartush will take on Harry Piers of New York.

* * *

Al Sherry writes from Dover, N. H., that Dave Shade is now training Ad Zachow, who is in the midst of a winning streak. Shade is still able to beat most of the middleweights.

BAER GO for Braddock IN JUNE

SCHMELING OUT

By David J. Walsh
International News Service Sports Editor.

New York, April 6—Through a complete reversal today of everything that previously had been assured and established, James J. Braddock, the man who returned from the limbo of boxing's forgotten, is practically in as the challenger in a heavyweight championship fight with Max Baer here in June.

Madison Square Garden will name Braddock on April 15, as required by its contract with Baer, and the latter will probably accept him—just to get rid of Braddock and the Garden at one and the same time.

This all was brought about by the receipt of a cable from Max Schmeling, informing his manager, Joe Jacobs, that, far from coming to America—as per the box commission's request—to fight Braddock in May, he wouldn't even be here for the proposed Baer meeting in June.

Schmeling, in a word, told Jacobs that he was going through with the Paulino fight in Berlin on July 7, meaning that he won't arrive here until August.

Lookabout, a keen factor in the early racing, swerved out entering the home stretch carrying Bright Light with her, was straightened out quickly and held on gamely after displacing Deliberate. Some One Else forced to race wide to enter a fordward position early, saved ground after reaching the home stretch and finished willingly.

6	Beyond Doubt	109	Merritt	6-1
2	Bethlehem Star	103	G. Watson	6-1
1	Post Brigade	x108	Lindberg	20-1

STONE MARTIN, a clever Florida winner, is on razor edge if the work tab is any criterion. XANDRA drubbed a shifty lot of platers in her season debut a few days back. PRINCE POMPEY may have been dead short last trip.

STAR PORTER, EVERGOLD, IDENTIFY.

FIFTH RACE—$1000, handicap, three-year-olds and up, six furlongs:

6	Star Porter	116	Workman	3-1
1	Evergold	110	Coucci	4-1
5	Identify	114	Bejshak	4-1
4	Stand Pat	118	Lindberg	4-1
3	Ladfield	105	Pollard	8-1
2	Our Mae	98	Merritt	10-1
7	Brown Twig	103	Jones	15-1

STAR PORTER was a bit short of work when he placed to Dogmata in the opening day feature. EVERGOLD closed like a runaway express in that same race and the increased distance should prove to his advantage. IDENTIFY for the remainder.

BYE BYE MARY, BIRD LORE, BELLATOR

SIXTH RACE—$800, claiming, three-year-olds, one mile, seventy yards:

7	Bye Bye Mary	110	Porter	2-1
6	Bird Lore	x110	Lindberg	2-1
4	Bellator	x110	Lindberg	6-1
5	Foreign Lady	x105	Dupre	4-1
2	Happy Easter	x105	Reid	6-1
3	Eastern Ruler	x105	C. W. Smith	15-1
1	Knight B'helor	110	G. Watson	20-1

BYE BYE MARY's victory earlier in the week was a corker considering that the Kandell colorbearer was all but knocked down at the break. BIRD LORE turned in a first rate performance in placing to Calgary Kay last trip. BELLATOR is fond of the strip and may show startling improvement.

POLAR BAR, WALKALONG, IDLE FLIRT

SEVENTH RACE—$800, claiming, three-year-olds and up, one and one-eighth miles:

8	Polo Bar	116	Jones	3-1
4	Walkalong	x111	C. W. Smith	4-1
3	Idle Flirt	x106	Lindbergh	4-1
7	Olamay	111	Pollard	12-1
5	Zembia	x108	Reid	8-1
6	Patient Saint	108	Jones	10-1
2	Fair Billy	116	Coucci	10-1
1	Cherokee Sal	x106	Faust	10-1
9	Cancimare	108	Porter	20-1

POLAR BAR evidently needed that last race. It was his first effort after a long layoff. WALKALONG, a clever sort at Tropical Park, is strictly the one to fear. IDLE FLIRT figures close up.

Terry Edges Knife

Three Rookies Due for Ride

By Associated Press

Memphis, April 6—Terry's pruning knife is expected to shave three rookies off the New York Giants' roster in the next few days. Indications are that First Baseman Joe Malay, Third Baseman Joe Martin and Second Baseman Al Cuccinello will be sent to the Nashville club of the Southern Association.

Orlando, Fla.—The Brooklyn Dodgers' last exhibition game was accompanied by some bad, as well as good, news. Van Mungo, great right-hander, started against Montreal yesterday but had to retire with a pulled muscle in his right shoulder. Lefty Clark went in, allowed one unearned run and looked better than he has all spring.

Birmingham, Ala.—Lou Gehrig's batting average still is a puny affair, but the New York Yankee first baseman can't say he isn't getting on base. He has been passed 10 times in the last three games, drawing four walks in a row in the exhibition with Birmingham yesterday.

Philadelphia—With the weather man's permission, the Phillies and Athletics pry open the lid on major league baseball in Philadelphia today in the first game of their annual five-day city series.

Fort Worth, Tex.—Al Simmons' annual spring batting slump, which has been worrying Manager Jimmy Dykes and the rest of the White Sox, apparently has ended ahead of schedule.

A week ago Simmons said he would start worrying if he hadn't started hitting by April 7. He started with a double in two times at bat Thursday, and yesterday helped defeat the Pittsburgh Pirates with a 330-foot homer, and a double which hit the 400-foot distant center field fence.

Chicago—Chicago fans had their first chance today to see how they like Larry French and Freddie Linstrom, obtained from Pittsburgh for Guy Bush and Jim Weaver, in Cub uniforms.

French, the Cubs' first starting Southpaw in years, was Manager Charlie Grimm's choice to oppose the Washington Senators in the first of a two-game series. Lindstrom, to date, is the regular third baseman.

CUBS MAY PLAY ON COAST

FIRST Must Win CUP

FACE REDS IN 3D GAME

By Walter Kiley

A third straight victory over the Providence Reds in the Canadian-American League championship game at the Garden tonight and the Bruin Cubs may be rewarded with a trip to the West Coast.

Guy Patrick, brother of Manager Frank of the Bruins and Manager Lester of the New York Rangers, is seriously engrossed on working out the financial angles of a minor league championship series at Vancouver, B. C., between the Cubs, probable winners of the Fontaine Cup, and the winner of the Detroit-Vancouver series now taking place on the Coast.

With 1-0 and 4-1 victories over the Reds, the Cubs have been so convincingly superior that they are overwhelming favorites to clean up the series this evening.

Faceoff at 8:30 p. m.

The game marks the finale of Boston hockey. Regardless of the outcome, ice will be removed from the Garden surface after the game.

In the event that Cubs should lose, a fourth game will be played at Providence tomorrow night and a fifth there on Tuesday evening, should the emergency arise.

An attendance of 10,000 is anticipated. This would set a 1934-1935 Can-Am League record.

Of the five Cubs' goals in the two opening games, Joe Jerwa, star defenseman, is credited with assists on three and scored another. His defensive work has been on a par.

He and Percy Jackson have been standouts. Jackson has allowed only one goal in 120 minutes of play.

Race Lull While Joker Is Solved

By Frank Moynihan

Racing in Massachusetts has again hit a snag. Movement along the race rialto will be quiet until next Tuesday when the race commission meets.

In the meantime "John Public" will mull over the latest question brought to light by Private Citizen Irving A. Tebo of Jamaica Plain.

It seems that when our illustrious statesmen drew up our racing laws they said, "No track shall be built within 50 miles of another track."

This clause is now beginning to haunt us. For Tebo points out that we may be wrong in issuing a license to build a track. This calls for a little legal advice.

So, on next Tuesday, when the racing commission sits in with the Supreme Court this technicality will be taken care of and a happy ending will ensue.

Then the racing promoters will go back to fighting each other for the honor of building the race plant. That is, unless some other trusting citizen who has the interest of the Commonwealth at heart pops up with another joker.

Last Call for Entrants In Ruth Identity Test

By Bill Connell

Last call for entrants in the Braves Babe Ruth Identity Test goes out today.

The Test deadline rings in tomorrow with the midnight chimes. All entries must be postmarked not later than midnight tomorrow to be eligible for Test awards.

The 250 pairs of free tickets for opening day at the Wigwam when Braves play Giants, April 16, made the contest effort worthwhile to all fans.

The rules:

No. 1—Identify a partially masked picture of a Braves player, starting March 11, each weekday for 20 days. Print name of player, position and whether he bats and throws right or left-handed, on form printed with picture.

No. 2—Write a letter of 50 words or less on the topic, "What Babe Ruth Will Do for the Braves." Ideas expressed, rather than English style, will count.

No. 3—Send 20 identified pictures with 50-word letter to Braves Identity Contest Editor, Boston American, 5 Winthrop square, Boston, postmarked not later than midnight, April 7. Awards will be made shortly afterwards.

Strack Eager To Defeat Sonny

Realizing that a victory over Sonnenberg will put him in line for several big bouts, Charlie Strack will "shoot the works" against Dynamite Gus when they meet Wednesday night in Alex MacLean's wrestling show at the Arena, Boston's only mat carnival next week.

Strack is confident that he can stop the amazing surge of the Dartmouth Dynamiter in their two out of three falls match. A strong defense for Sonnenberg's flying tackles, which seem to be packing the old T. N. T., will be Strack's chief hope for victory.

In an old-timers' game at East Boston high school gym, Pere Marquette defeated Fitton A. C., 24-16.

ROSS Shuns AMBERS

McLARNIN GO IN MAY

By Eddie Muller
Universal Service Staff Correspondent

San Francisco, April 6—Barney Ross, lightweight champion of the world, will not fight Lew Ambers but will meet Jimmy McLarnin in a welterweight championship match in May.

This sudden change in the title-holder's plans was revealed during a telephone conversation between Sam Pian, Ross' manager, and this writer.

Pian and Ross are in Seattle, Wash., where Barney meets Henry Woods next Tuesday night.

Pian said:

"We are going right back to New York after the Woods match. No contracts were signed for a bout with Ambers in June.

"We're going to get another crack at McLarnin and his 147-pound title first. This battle is tentatively set for some time in May."

In making such a move, Pian is playing safe all around. If Ross whips McLarnin and wins back the crown he lost to the Irishman last year he probably will relinquish the lightweight honors.

It is a known fact that Barney has trouble making the class weight of 1335.

Even if Ross loses to McLarnin he will still retain his lightweight championship.

He then can engage Ambers, selected by the New York commission as No. 1 challenger, in an outdoor New York match, with his laurels at stake.

Senator Huey Outsmarted?

Captain Biff Moves To Oklahoma State

By Universal Service

Washington, April 6—Did the War Department work a bit of army strategy on Senator Huey P. Long of Louisiana?

High army officials made indignant denial while administration leaders smiled.

Biff Jones

At any rate the War Department transferred Captain Howard "Biff" Jones, famous football coach, from Louisiana State University to R. O. T. C. duty at Oklahoma State University.

Last fall Senator Long started to give a "pep" talk between halves of a Louisiana game but was ordered out of the locker room by Jones.

Long "fired" Jones. At the same time Jones resigned as coach.

Captain Jones, however, still had some months of teaching at Baton Rouge when along came the surprise War Department transfer.

Army officials were insistent there was no significance in the transfer. It was merely explained all transfers are "for the good of the service."

Informed of the change, Senator Long exploded.

"Ain't that swell. Congratulate me. It's the best news I have had in a long time. We'll have the world's championship football team next year."

Gracie Back Tonight

Toronto, April 6 — Montreal Maroons will be at full strength for the second game of the Stanley Cup series with Toronto here tonight.

Bob Gracie, center, and Gus Marker, right wing, injured in the opening game, which the Maroons won, will be ready for the fray, according to Dr. A. A. McKay, club physician.

INSURANCE LAW ABUSES AUTO OWNERS

This is the twelfth and final article of the series discussing abuses under the compulsory auto insurance law.

The present compulsory auto insurance law is held to be an abuse of the rights of automobile owners because:

1—It has spawned a fake claim racket.

2—It is administered under an unfair zone system.

3—It taxes the careful motorist for the sins of the reckless.

4—It makes the state motor vehicle registry a "collection agency."

5—It is headed in the direction of constantly increasing rates.

1a—Twenty thousand false claims, totalling upwards of $3,000,000 losses annually, add 20 to 25 per cent to the rates, Registrar Frank A. Goodwin estimates.

2a—The zone system places a premium on garaging in high-rate areas and in itself has developed an illegal registration racket.

3a—The auto owners whose cars figure in accidents and whose accidents raise the rates pay no more than owners whose cars have never figured in any accident. No reward for careful driving, no punishment for carelessness.

4a—In a single year insurance companies cancelled 113,000 policies through the registry for non-payment of premiums, forcing the registry automatically to cancel registrations.

5a—With costs and losses increasing annually, Registrar Goodwin sees no possibility of rate reductions under the present set up.

CHANGES FAVORED

What is to be done about it?

Repeal of the law and dispensing with all compulsory insurance is the course favored by many.

Many others would retain the compulsory feature but take the business from private insurance companies and set up a state fund to underwrite it and administer it.

Others would change the present law to eliminate the zone system, provide for more rigid investigation of claims but retain the private company feature.

SPECIAL STUDY

And still others would set up a special commission to study the problem and make recommendations to be acted upon by the Legislature.

Among those favoring the special commission to study the problem is the legislative committee on judiciary.

The committee would pass along to a commission what the Legislature as a whole has been unable to accomplish during several years of wrestling with complaints about the present law.

Many say they would favor this study by a commission if they were assured: That the commission would give first consideration to the rights of the auto owners—that the study would not require too long a time—that the Legislature would abide by the recommendations of the commission and not merely make them another brass ring to be snatched at from the merry-go-round.

NEW AL JOLSON RADIO HOUR TONIGHT

By N. F. T.

When Al Jolson steps before the transcontinental microphone to inaugurate his new series of "Chateau" programs (WEEI), between 9:30 and 10:30 tonight, Victor Young and his orchestra will throw up the musical backdrop for the network's newest full hour broadcast.

The youthful maestro, who has been starred on a number of important commercial series, is well known to radio followers for his skillful direction and popular musical arrangements.

"N. F. T."

Benay Venuta, an eye-filling newcomer to the air waves, who owes her opportunities to the fact that Al Jolson heard her sing in a West Coast night club, is the first vocalist to win a niche with Jolson and Young in the "Chateau" setting. Two other singers, a girl and a boy, will soon be announced as regular performers.

Al Jolson will gear his talents, which have earned him rank and a fat roll in the entertainment world, to the triple activity of actor, comedian and singer in addition to his task of host of the weekly "Chateau" radio hours. Each week will bring guest stars from the world of stage, screen and sport to join Jolson at the microphone. If only they don't make it too much Jolson!

The second annual Army Day program of the Forty and Eight will be heard (WBZ) this evening from 7.00 to 8:00 p. m. It goes out from studios in Radio City, Washington and Boston. Speakers will include Senator Frederick Steiwer of Oregon; Representative Scott W. Lucas of Illinois; John D. Crowley, Chef de Chemin de Fer of the 40 and 8; Frank Belgrano, national commander of the American Legion and other officials of the Legion and 40 and 8.

Lieutenant Colonel W. A. Ganoe, whose broadcasts over Station WAAB and associated stations of the Yankee Network have been received with enthusiastic response this winter, will present a special address tonight from 8.15 to 8.30 p. m. Today is Army Day, as designated by the President of the United States for commemoration of the deeds of the nation's soldiers.

Colonel Ganoe will depart from the trend of his present series of short sketches of little known military men, and will launch into the vital situation in which he believes the United States finds itself today.

FLOYD GIBBONS' PAGE OF THRILLS AND MYSTERY

"The Red Sea Horror"

Nick Martin Watched His Only Chance Dwindling Away in the Distance

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO, EVERYBODY!

Step up, boys and girls and meet Dominic Martin, of 373 Thomas street, Teaneck, N. J., whose life, ever since he was born, back in 1901, in South Shields, County Durham, England, had been one long, grand adventure, ashore and afloat.

FLOYD GIBBONS

Nick sends in a list of the ships he has sailed on and the adventures he has been through, that is as long as your arm, but his biggest thrill came to him in October, 1919, on the British freighter S. S. Penrose, sailing through the Red Sea three hours out of the port of Perim.

The Penrose was a turret ship—one of a sort that are uncommon these days. They have a long, raised belly, or turret, running fore and aft, the entire length of the ship with decks on either side of it.

When the ship is loaded these lower decks are just a couple feet above the water-line, and in rough weather they are mostly under water. And it was those flooded lower decks that turned out to be Nick's nemesis.

It was a dark night and there was a pretty strong gale blowing. Nick was on his way down to the lower deck to draw up a bucketful of water.

He was watching his chance to get down and throw his bucket overboard between dips of the ship, but somehow he miscalculated —hit that sea-washed deck just as a big comber came along and raked the port side of the vessel from stem to stern.

Nick got more water then than his bucket would hold. He got 20 or 30 tons of it. It picked him up like a chip of wood, and before he knew it he was overboard, floundering around in the mud-colored waters of the Red Sea.

He was well overboard before he thought of letting go of the bucket. The next thing that entered his mind was the propeller, and he struck out seaward to keep clear of its whirling blade. Once he was clear of that he started yelling for help. But if anybody heard his cries they gave no indication of it, for the ship kept on in its course, its lights moving steadily away.

The ship was more than a mile away before its lights swung about and began coming back toward him. And during that time Nick swam on in an agony of suspense, wondering if his efforts were to end only in exhaustion and a strangling death below the muddy surface of the sea.

Later he found out the cause of the delay in turning back. The only man who had seen him go over the side was a Chinese sailor who had signed on at Calcutta, and the nearest he could come to "Man overboard" in his limited English was: "Look the boy—look the boy!"

It took a long time, but eventually he got his message home. When he did the boat was brought from "full speed ahead" to "stop" in one order—a maneuver that snapped the deck rails like match sticks.

They didn't know how far away Nick was, and the more the ship turned the more confused they became as to the direction. They could still hear his yells, faint and distant, but direction is deceptive in midsea and the night was pitch black, with storm clouds overhead, shutting out the moon.

As each successive wave broke it gleamed with phosphorescent light, and that, in the end, was what saved Nick's life. For, in breaking water, Nick was causing a phosphorescence of his own, and it was this queer, glimmering light that the captain spotted through his glass.

All this time Nick had been swimming steadily, using the breast stroke so he could keep his eye on the ship's lights. He saw a boat being lowered—heard the captain on the bridge directing it toward him through his megaphone.

By now his yells for help had become something of a hoarse scream way down in the back of his throat.

Soon Nick could hear them calling to him—could hear the sound of oars made in the rowlocks as the lifeboat came pitching toward him. He was almost all in when he felt a hand grab him—felt strong arms pulling him over the side of the boat. A Portuguese sailor, with a hand on his shoulder, said, "Where you been, boy? For swim, eh?

All the time he had been in the water Nick had never missed a stroke. But now, thinking he was safe, he relaxed. That relaxing nearly cost him his life.

With the easing of the nervous tension he lapsed into unconsciousness—in two feet of water that was sloshing around in the bottom of the boat. "Just my luck," says Nick, "after swimming for more than an hour in mid-ocean to go blotto in some more of the same."

Nick came to again on the deck of the Penrose after they had rolled the water out of him and applied artificial respiration. The first thing he heard as he came out of the fog was the captain saying:

"I wouldn't have lost him for a hundred pounds."

"That," says Nick "was less than four hundred dollars, so I guess he was feeling quite reckless with his dough that night."

But if you'd put it up to Nick when he was floundering around in the water, with the ship a mile away and still going, I don't think he'd have offered you a dime for his chance of being alive two hours later.

BELLE Livingston Stays in Boston

By GEORGE HOLLAND

In the theater, there being nothing new beginning Monday with a zing to it (if you don't object to too many words ending in i-n-g) I should like to recommend a spot just two days old which is called the "Blue Train."

Boston's old friend, bon vivant and boniface extraordinary, Lemuel C. Prior, owns the "Blue Train" because it is part of his Hotel Lenox, and he financed the proposition which (three rahs, a choo-choo-rah rah, a rickety-ex-co-ex-co-ex, and Hah-vard, Har-VARD) keeps Belle Livingston in Boston.

George Holland

* * *

La Belle is the idea woman of the "Blue Train," as well as the hostess. Downstairs, as you go in, you will find a counterpart of an American Express office in Paris. Until the Rev. Charles S. Bodwell of the Watch and Ward Society reads these lines (and he reads them nearly every day) you will also find copies of all the Paris magazines.

Upstairs, you will find a young woman named Vivian Field, who sings songs. She sings songs about a prince, about Hollywood, about so foamy a subject as beer, about something called men and about as neatly as any seller of risque songs of the female gender ever sang a song.

She will be the rage of the town shortly, probably by Monday, I predict, and I am happy to devote this much space to the assorted subjects of Lemuel C. Prior, Belle Livingston, Leo Beers (who plays for Miss Field) and the "Blue Train," in order to establish the fact that Miss Field is really grand.

So is Miss Livingston.

* * *

We should hew to the line, let the chips fall where they may, and by keeping to night-clubs as the subject of discussion, those who cavort here and there of nights will be in a dither to learn that Archie Robbins is coming to town again, to the Cocoanut Grove as master of ceremonies.

I heard Al Taxier sign him by telephone and Mr. Taxier, the handsomest panjandrum of the night clubs if you except Tommy McArdle of the Metropolitan Rathskeller, was so enthusiastic about Mr. Robbins' return that he was almost incoherently modest in describing the Grove's incoming dancers, Gautchen and Sonnen, and Corbra, whose costume is white paint, as the greatest hoofers (a horrid word) he has ever seen.

* * *

Reading this over, it dawns on me that your correspondent gets enthusiastic about things he likes. Greta Maren in "A Journey by Night" continues next week at the Shubert Theater and Harris Morgan thinks she is swell and the show is entertaining.

Chicago's "Black Fury" Arouses Warners

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, April 6—The Chicago censor board is busy again. Jack Warner today received official word that Chicago is refusing to grant permission to show "Black Fury." Shades of Major Funkhauser, the autocratic gentleman who used to dictate the censorial policy of the Windy City!

Pennsylvania, the scene of the coal miners and strikers, passed the picture without a cut. So did New York. But Chicago is objecting! Why?

"Black Fury" is a strong story of the coal mines. The men who are sworn in to protect the mines are renegades and not real officers of the law. The labor unions are shown in a favorable light and Communism is not even mentioned. As for Paul Muni's performance, it's one of the finest you will ever see on the screen or stage.

Adolph Zukor's valiant fight to remain at the head of Paramount has been rewarded. Zukor remains in charge in New York, while Ernst Lubitsch will be permitted complete leeway to produce pictures in Hollywood. In other words, he will have no interference.

Henry Herzbrun, who is well liked by all the Paramount stars and directors, will be in complete charge of the business end and will not be harassed in his dealings by outside bosses. However, the executive committee will send out a representative to confer with both Lubitsch and Herzbrun.

I don't know of any stories that were more popular than the Peter B. Kyne "Cappy Ricks" series when they were first published. They were made into a silent movie and I have often wondered why some enterprising producer didn't bring them back. Seems as if Trem Carr had anticipated that thought for he has just completed negotiations with Peter B. himself for the screen rights.

He will star Robert McWade in this series, which will be made in June or July. If the first proves successful Trem has options on two more for the same character. With Trem's ability he ought to be able to turn out some right smart entertainment.

* * *

Chatter in Hollywood: Edmund Lowe is the latest to succumb to the fascinations of Merle Oberon, she of the Oriental beauty. They have been dancing and going places together. Eddie, who was paying ardent court to the lovely Virginia Bruce, has the last week concentrated on Miss Oberon, who seems to have many, many admirers.

Reports that she would marry a certain young actor when he becomes free are apparently premature, for she is here, there and everywhere with all of Hollywood's unattached men.

* * *

A Line or Two: Jack Larue, who today was all kissed and made up with his socialite girl friend, Connie Simpson, was getting ready to report for work at Columbia. He plays a lovable heavy opposite Nancy Carroll in "The Song of the Dance," and apparently that's the same picture I understood was to be called "The Song of the Damned." My error!

You will soon meet on the screen Marianna Edwards, a four-year-old baby who has just been made the leading lady for "Our Gang" comedies. She is an adorable youngster and you will see her first in "Goodnight, Lady," which is the first on her five-year contract.

Snapshots of Hollywood

KAY FRANCIS, who has more admirers than we have room to print, off for Europe in another two weeks. KAY isn't saying whether it's MAURICE CHEVALIER or the Italian count who is the attraction, probably both.

JOSEPHINE HUTCHINSON'S mother, LEONA ROBERTS, stage actress, arriving Sunday to visit JOSEPHINE and the bridegroom, JIMMY TOWNSEND.

JEROME KERN to write atmospheric music for "The Flame Within," EDMUND GOULDING'S coming opus. April 19 is MAY ROBSON'S 70th birthday and marks the beginning of her 52nd year on the stage. It should be a Hollywood celebration, she is so beloved by everyone. CHARLES LEDERER, popular man-about-town and well known writer, buying SALLY O'NEIL'S luncheon.

ALBERT KAUFMAN with SYLVIA SIDNEY dining at Victor Hugo's. SYLVIA seldom has a free evening, what with all the young vying with each other to take her places. That's all today.

Gala Stage Offering; Gem on Screen

Buck and Bubbles, that lackadaisical pair of veterans from many a fast-moving sepia revue, headline an excellent stage show at the RKO Keith Boston this week.

"Roberta," starring the nimble Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers and Irene Dunne, has moved on to the Boston screen from across the street for the convenience of the many who still haven't seen this superb musical.

Buck and Bubbles defy description. Presenting merely a scattering of song, dance, a little comedy, most of it impromptu, and some piano vamping from the diminutive Bubbles, these boys contrive to put on a show that must be the despair of carefully rehearsed vaudeville acts.

With all the nonchalance in the world they wander through their act, even leaving the stage completely when the mood takes them, and audiences invariably call them back time after time for well deserved curtains.

Indeed, their insouciance is one of the secrets of their success, with the spectator feeling that he has happened upon a bit of unstudied and delightful clowning on the part of two very lazy boys. Buck and Bubbles are quite perfect in their own way.

In addition Jack Eddy and Company present some agile adagio dancing, while Toto, in a series of grotesque costumes, offers an amusing skit. Eleanor Sherry returns to the Boston this week, and the Three Kanes complete a good bill.

Not much need be said for "Roberta," which has already coaxed so much lineage for its excellence and beauty. Fred Astaire is at his best, which means that he is just about America's most popular dancer. Ginger Rogers and Irene Dunne decorate this lavish production.

To Star in New Stage Comedy

Tallulah Bankhead will return to Boston in a new comedy called "Something Gay," which comes to the Plymouth Saturday evening, April 20.

Al Somerby to Be Feted

It is expected that more than one thousand men and women will attend the reception and dinner to be given to Al Somerby, popular theater executive, at the Copley-Plaza on Monday evening.

The committee in charge of the affair is headed by Joseph H. Brennan, executive secretary of the Allied Theaters, assisted by Stanley Sumner Louis M. Boas and more than two score other well-known theater officials. The occasion will mark Mr. Somerby's 35th year of service with the Lothrop theatrical interests, making his headquarters at the Bowdoin Square Theater.

Al Somerby

The reception is scheduled to begin at 6 30, while the dinner will commence at 7. The speakers will include Governor Curley, Lieutenant-Governor Hurley and Mayor Mansfield and others will be a feature of the program.

Air Classic at Orpheum

"West Point of the Air," the latest of sky pictures, produced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and starring Wallace Beery is the current screen attraction at Loew's Orpheum theater.

In this thrilling picture Beery appears as the father of a West Point graduate, Robert Young, training for the Army Air Corps. In the role of the stern parent, determined to see his boy distinguish himself, Beery does much serious work in admirable fashion.

Vera Gordon, veteran stage and screen mother, heads the vaudeville in a comedy sketch written especially for her by Edgar Allan Woolf entitled "Reunion in America," one of the best skits seen in variety in a long while.

Brown and Whalen furnished much laughter in their comicalities styled "A Laugh or Two," and other acts included Jeanette Hackett and Ivan Triesault in an elaborate dancing revue; Fay, Harmon and Fay; Buddy Monroe and the La Varr brothers.

At State

'Naughty Marietta' Rich in Melody

By JOYCE DANA

Much of the charm that will keep the Victor Herbert melodies alive through movies and centuries, has been captured in "Naughty Marietta" which opened at Loew's State yesterday.

Here is far and away the lovely and talented Jeanette MacDonald's best picture.

Striking a new and happy medium between the sophistication of the merry widow, Sonia, and its too vacuous predecessors, Miss MacDonald is completely captivating as the Princess Marie de Bonfain, who ran away to New Orleans to escape marriage with the unprepossessing Don Carlos.

* * *

Furthermore, in addition to the lilting melody of "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life," and "I'm Falling in Love With Someone," the romantic story and the agreeable production, there's Nelson Eddy.

Mr. Eddy, with a voice the Metropolitan Opera ought to steal away from Hollywood and the radio, is a fine and vigorous young man who looks almost as good as he sounds.

We're betting on Hollywood, which has a way of making life and contracts tempting for aspiring young baritones. In any event, Miss MacDonald and Mr. Eddy are a fine, handsome, romantic pair of young sweethearts, and their presence and performances add immeasurably to one of the very best of the season's musicals.

The background is colorful and, for which the surfeited moviegoers may be thankful, not too ornate, and the direction, to W. A. Van Dyke and Hunt Stromberg, is one of Hollywood's rare triumphs.

* * *

Frank Morgan as the befuddled Governor of the French colony, with a keen-eyed and shrewish wife, is perfectly cast. Elsa Lanchester (in private life Mrs. Charles Laughton), plays the first lady of New Orleans with just the proper mixture of hard-boiled assurance and feminine intuition.

But despite the general excellence of these minor performances, it is Mr. Eddy's picture. He's the best bet of the season, and if Miss MacDonald uses her charming flair as a comedienne as well, gets parts as good, and sings as delightfully from now on, her honors will overwhelm her.

Olsens Win Ovation

Ethel Shutta Featured With Orchestra; "White's Scandals" Lavish Film

By Harris Morgan

Mr. and Mrs. George Olsen brought their celebrated band to the stage of the Metropolitan Theater yesterday, presenting a show that had pace, color, humor, and, strange in these times, even a touch of genuine satire.

The screen offers George White, entering a new field with a cinema edition of his Scandals, featuring blonde Alice Faye, James Dunn, Lyda Roberti, Cliff Edwards and the redoubtable Mr. White himself.

It has become quite unnecessary to say that the above Mrs. Olsen is Ethel Shutta, one of the best of singers and an admirable comedienne. The Misses Garbo, West and Velez, and Jimmy Durante of the extravagant nose are taken off by Miss Shutta in a parody rendition of "La Cucaracha."

Miss Shutta is always good fun, with none of the glittery smartness often employed by feminine luminaries of the first rank.

The Olsen band is as versatile as ever, and members of the organization come out in front with startling regularity for specialty numbers.

Bob Rice, who is apparently choral master for the Olsen band, led his students in an attack on "The Man on the Flying Trapeze." This skit is elaborated with a good many appropriate gestures, both rehearsed and impromptu, from the boys, and the result is little short of magnificent.

"Rigoletto," no less, is offered by a quartette of the Olsen henchmen. It isn't the "Rigoletto" to be seen at the Opera House, but, with all respect for both, it's far funnier.

George White lives up to a reputation for lavishness in his "Scandals of 1935."

There are a lot of pretty girls, a lot of intricate dance arrangements, and a good cast. Jimmy Dunn and Alice Faye are two small-town amateurs with a great yearning for Broadway. Ned Sparks, as Elmer White, is conducting a bucolic edition of the Broadway Scandals, when George White in person pops onto the scene.

George wants Alice for his show, but before he can get her away he has to take very nearly the whole town with him. Alice and Jimmie are inevitably spoiled by success. They drift apart, and Mr. White in whole-hearted disgust fires them.

Only when Aunt Jane comes up from the South to see her two charges perform, will he take them back. They've learned their lesson, and decide to co-star in real life, as well. Lyda Roberti, Cliff Edwards, and Benny Rubin, whose part is far too small, contribute to this amusing and extravagant revue.

Kelly on Scollay Screen

"McFadden's Flats," with the homely humors of a prevalent cross-section of American life a few years back, is the new screen feature at the Scollay Square.

The companion picture on a bill of ace entertainment value is Warner Brothers "The Florentine Dagger," another in the Clue Club mysteries, which have found thousands of fervent fans both on the radio and screen.

Walter C. Kelly, whose photograph records and funny business have kept America laughing for a couple of decades, makes his screen debut as McFadden, and adds plenty to the hilarity of the curt and kindly old Irishman whose amusing dilemmas build up the comedy plot.

OPERA

Final Wagner Gem Given

By Ann Ames

Without the benefit of a star-spangled cast, the Metropolitan Opera Company presented "The Mastersingers of Nuremberg," last of the Wagnerian repertoire, before another capacity audience at the Opera House last evening.

The distinguished audience, gathering their opera while they may, included Governor James M. Curley, Miss Mary Curley and the governor's staff. Mr. Lawrence Tibbett, who sings in the presentation of "Faust" this afternoon, was also in the audience.

There is perhaps no more generally appealing opera from the great Wagner than "Die Meistersinger." Its music has a sweeping and broad melody, its story, ironically enough written while the composer was in the depths of despair, has a swinging humor, an infectious gayety, a popular charm.

• • •

Arthur Bodansky again conducted. That alone is an assurance of a superb and brilliant interpretation. The simple, human love story, set against the picturesque background of old Nuremberg, has an appeal, with its rich thematic music, that sets it apart from the heavier "Ring" operas.

Last evening Editha Fleischer sang superbly in the role of Eva, daughter of the goldsmith Pogner, whose fate and future depends upon the winner of the song contest.

While the performance did not, on the whole, reach the brilliant levels of "Die Walkure" or "Lohengrin," it was for many listeners, the most thoroughly satisfactory opera of our brief week.

The choral work was especially distinctive. The final scene, in the rolling meadows overlooking Nuremberg, with Paul Althouse singing the "Prize Song," mainstay of the opera and one of the most melodic and beautiful of the Wagner opera songs, was magnificently presented.

• • •

Friedrich Schorr, too, has his finest role as the kindly Hans Sachs, official mentor of the Mastersingers, unofficial Cupid of the town. This part is full and rich, both vocally and dramatically, and last evening's Hans was felicitously chosen and presented.

The big-eyed Gustav Schuetzendorff, with just the sense of humor that the part calls for, clowned delightfully as the fussy old Beckmesser. There's a pleasant mean between overdoing Wagner's fling at comedy, and underplaying it, and last night's portrayal, excellently sung, found that level.

Here, in his lighter mood, Wagner has once more demonstrated his clever showmanship. Through Hans Sachs, who lovingly and carefully copies Walther's "Prize Song," as the aspiring contestant for honors and Eva's hand rehearses it, and in the very skillfully scored quintet, the audience is ready for the thrilling and romantic climax.

Gounod's "Faust" and Donizetti's "Lucia di Lammermoor" with Lily Pons, close the brief Boston season this evening.

RECEIVER ASKED FOR SEABOARD

Appointment of a receiver for the Seaboard Utilities Shares Corp. was asked today in Suffolk superior court.

William L. Sullivan of Boston, a stockholder, filed the bill He asked directors be held liable for losses and that C. D. Parker & Co., Inc., of Boston be decreed to owe Seaboard $2,100,000.

Sullivan asserted the public invested $16,000,000 in Seaboard and that, on last December 31, the assets were only $1,933.

Hearing is set for April 11.

The bill also names as respondents Chauncy D. Parker, Bowen Tufts, Charles R. Adams, Edward L. Bennett, Merton E. Grush, Harold B. Lamont, Edward C. Mason, Harold G. Storke, Harry L. Norris, Manning W. Morrill, Howard H. Davenport, Richard C. Moore, all of Boston, and Robert W. Rollins of Worcester.

Sullivan alleges that Seaboard was induced to turn over practically all its cash to the Parker concern.

He seeks to establish indebtedness of the Parker concern for $1,568,937 allegedly turned over for this purpose and for $499,731 allegedly turned over to buy treasury shares.

Sullivan states that Seaboard was to purchase public utilities stocks but actually bought holding companies stock. He sets the cost of these at $2,435,263, present value $152,591.

The bill was filed by Attorney David Stoneman.

Today's "About Faces" Hollywood stars are flashed across the silver screen of the LYNN Paramount Theater, where Manager J. J. Dempsey has arranged for the first North Shore showing of "The Little Colonel" and "Under Pressure." In these two pictures you will recognize all four of today's cinema celebrities.

Use the letter "M" as a guide and fill in the correct identifications in the squares beneath each drawing. Remember that each square equals a letter in the name of the star that is drawn above.

Send ALL six of your "About Faces" drawings as they appeared this week in the Boston Evening American, with the proper solutions, to: The About Faces Editor, Boston Evening American, Boston, Mass. Today's is the last in this week's "About Faces" series. A brand new series begins this Monday!

ACE-IN-HOLE

Handy for Atchison Dividend

Chicago — Atchison has available an "ace in the hole" which could be used if needed to bring net income for year ended June 30, 1935, up to full coverage of its 5 per cent noncumulative preferred dividends for the period.

Such coverage is required under the charter if the company is to pay full preferred dividends and anything on the common for such fiscal period.

Balance sheet of Western Improvement Co., a non-carrier subsidiary, and its affiliate, revealed for the first time along with those of other wholly-owned terminal and collateral companies in the Atchison's 1934 report, show government security holdings of $3,924,000 and cash of $1,121,000, or a total of over $5,000,000 for those two items.

This total is considerably in excess of amounts required by those companies for working capital, said President Bledsoe of Atchison. Including government securities, current assets of Western Improvement Co. and affiliates on December 31, last, were $7,254,000, against current liabilities of only $227,863.

Mr. Bledsoe declined to comment as to whether Western Improvement Co. would be likely to declare another dividend before June 30, next, or probable amount of any such dividend, if declared, saying that was a matter for the Western Improvement board.

BIG MEAT Packers PROFIT

RISE IN COSTS CONTINUES

Chicago—March will show big packers as having come through the month with losses on fresh meat operations offset by returns from packed products plus improved yields on leather, soaps, fertilizer and canned meats.

As a result the first five months of the current fiscal year brought profits after charges a shade better than in the like 1934 period.

The small packers, however, who are dependent almost exclusively on fresh meat sales, show nothing but losses to date and their position is distinctly unfavorable.

Leading American packers like Armour, Swift, Wilson, Cudahy, Morrell, Hormel and others are well stocked with inventory and are confident they will secure a quite adequate offset through inventory gains to unavoidable losses on fresh meat trade.

Average rate of production in the industry is now 50 per cent, which means costs have moved up sharply and can only be counteracted by packers who have laid in inventory when it was available, have well rounded outside lines and established by-products divisions.

Tonnage sales over the past month of two have been well below normal and no thorough recovery is, of course, possible until the nation again is producing a normal quota of meat animals.

MOTOR REVIEW

Reveals Production Increase

By International News Service

Ford domestic production during the three-month period was 386,326 units, 98 per cent higher than the total turned out during the first three months of last year.

Ford retail deliveries for the first quarter totaled 293,318 units, 116 per cent above last year's three-month total, and 33 per cent higher than deliveries during the first quarters of 1932, 1933 and 1934 combined.

Oldsmobile broke all production records during March, building and shipping 18,432 units, bringing its first-quarter production to 44,441, an increase of 175 per cent over the 1934 figure for the same period.

Graham production during the first quarter totaled 9089, the highest in four years, and nearly 50 per cent greater than the turnout for the first quarter of 1934.

Plymouth deliveries for the quarter were 87,502 units, 50.6 per cent higher than last year. The Detroit and Los Angeles plants were producing during March an average of 2000 cars daily. Total shipments from the plants during the first quarter were 136,040 units.

Dodge dealers delivered 77,699 cars and trucks during the three-month period, 73.7 per cent more passenger cars than in last year's first quarter, and 62.9 per cent more commercial cars.

Cram's Reports estimated April production in all plants in the United States and Canada at 450,000 units.

RELIEF BILL

Supplies MARKET Cheer

By Hugh E. Bradshaw

The buoyant markets toward the week end can be traced to the setting up of the greatest relief fund in history. Never has anything rivalled the fund entrusted to President Roosevelt.

With nearly five thousand million dollars to promote trade it is hardly to be wondered that securities markets brightened. The promise is for a smaller late spring and summer business recession than would otherwise take place. Then, too, the outlook for fall is more rosy. Already there are signs business itself expected to do quite well after the summer lull passed.

Carter Glass

While the actual results of the work-relief bill must be viewed optimistically one must scan the other side of the picture with trepidation. When and how will the bill be paid when rendered. It is a colossal task that confronts taxpayers. And, as Senator Carter Glass says, the biggest howl ever heard is coming from the taxpayers when the collector steps around to their door. One wonders if, in starting the country out of the depression via the spending route, deflationary forces are not set in action that will make the journey a tortuous one.

Notebook—The utilities certainly are having their day . . . We have an idea it is almost ended for the present . . . Enthusiasm has been quite marked and public buying undoubtedly has been of the emotional variety . . . With little thought given to values or the controversial condition surrounding the Rayburn bill, even though utility executives are putting up a good fight . . . Consolidated Gas has reached an objective at 21 . . . A reaction from close to that price is logical . . . Other leading power and light shares are in a similar position.

The question of whether the market has inaugurated a new intermediate upward trend is occupying the attention of technical students. The answer is somewhat mixed with a majority of those we contact thinking negatively. They feel the list is simply extended a subnormal technical recovery into a more reasonable affair. Then they add that if a real turn has been made it will not be possible to take a definite, bullish stand until a following reaction tests out the worth of the rally by holding above previous lows.

Shorts: The tottering gold bloc has conjured up the somewhat frayed spectre of a currency war . . . It is worth remembering that most of the countries still on gold have a fair supply of the metal . . . Their position is akin to that of the United States in 1933 . . . To us it looks like a new deal all around . . . Currencies freed of gold will seek their proper relation in the exchange marts . . . Stabilization may be slower in coming, but the answer to a depreciation race is so obviously zero that we think it will be sought by the whole world.

GRAIN FUTURES

Steady to Easy

Chicago, April 6 (INS)—Grain futures were steady to easy today in quiet trading. Wheat was unchanged to ⅛c off, corn ¼ to ⅜c down and oats ¼c lower to ⅜c higher.

Liverpool closed strong but was offset by rains in the grain belt here and weakness in Rotterdam.

Curb Prices Are Steady

By Associated Press

New York, April 6—Curb market stocks showed a generally steady tone today with slight improvement recorded for most all divisions except utilities which were narrow. Trading was moderately active.

Among active shares selling higher were Pittsburgh Plate Glass, Sherwin Williams, Distillers Corp., Seagrams, and Great Atlantic & Pacific, New Jersey Zinc and Newmont each gained more than a point.

Profit taking and week-end adjustment of accounts held utilities and some of the oil shares in check. American Gas and Electric Bond & Share held unchanged.

American Cyanamid "B" dipped a trifle on small sales.

NEW RAIL Rates in Effect THIS MONTH

The Railroads, it was reported, hope to put the emergency freight rate increases granted by the Interstate Commerce Commission into effect by April 15.

Negotiations are currently going forward to speed the starting of these charges, which will bring in additional revenue to the roads at an estimated rate of $85,000,000 annually between now and June of next year. Freight loadings meantime, are rising, which aids the rail outlook.

Loadings of 617,486 cars in the March 30 week were not only 9703 cars above the preceding week, but 7295 cars above the like week of last year, representing the first increase shown over a like week a year ago since February 9 last.

Baby Bond Sales Slow In Cities

Treasury Department reports of the sale of baby bonds indicate that these obligations have proven more popular in the smaller communities over the country than in the large cities.

Individual investments in Western and Southern cities were larger than in the Eastern ones.

Banking experts have long expressed some concern over the large amount of government debt held by banks on the theory that if any sudden pressure to sell the bonds should develop it would be difficult, if not impossible, to liquidate them.

If a larger portion of the government debt could be diverted to private holders the market would automatically become broader and less subject to sudden pressure, it is emphasized.

STOCKS Irregularly HIGHER

RAILS ARE STRONG

New York, April 6—The Stock Market moved irregularly higher in moderate trading today.

Railroad shares continued strong. Atchison and Union Pacific gained nearly a point, while Baltimore & Ohio, New York Central, Southern Railway and Southern Pacific recorded lesser advances.

American Water Works, United Gas Improvement, National Power & Light and several lower priced power and light shares advanced fractionally to their best levels on the current movement.

In the industrial shares Bethlehem Steel and U. S. Steel were sluggish, but American Can was fractionally higher.

General Motors and Chrysler scored fractional gains.

Merchandising shares were strong, with the exception of Macy, which worked fractionally lower.

Mixed Sentiment

Initial stock dealings found the market guided to some extent by a few hopeful items in the day's news. These included:

Sales gains of the two largest mail order houses which brought totals to new highs for March in spite of the late Easter.

Sears, Roebuck & Co. had a rise of 29.7 per cent for the four weeks ended March 26, while Montgomery Ward showed an advance of 24.4 per cent in March over last year.

The largest steel ingot production for the first quarter since 1931, reported by the American Iron & Steel Institute.

The jump in profits of Consolidated Oil from $1.28 in 1933 to $5.43 on the preferred shares last year.

On the other hand, sentiment was somewhat chilled by the drop in net earnings from $2.02 to $1.95 on the common stock of R. H. Macy and affiliates in spite of a rise in 1934 sales to $118,211,078 compared with $112,671,769 in 1933.

The pound sterling opened at $4.84⅛, up ¼ of a cent. The French franc at 6.58⅝ cents was unchanged.

Guilders rallied .89 of a cent to 67.24 cents, while the belga was off .04 of a cent at 16.92 cents.

HIGHEST Grade Bonds IN DEMAND

The inclination of the market, said one bond broker, is toward high grade bonds again, though it is only in recent weeks that the volatile and very cheap issues have been left alone.

This broker notes that the purchaser of second grade bonds has not fared badly at all.

He explains this grading at issues ranging in price from 50 to 90 which combined generous yields with reasonable security and some room for appreciation.

This type of purchaser, he remarked, has seen his bonds rise 20 to 40 points and, unless he consolidated his profits in higher grade bonds, he has also seen them drop 10 to 30 points.

The income he received compensated for the wider market fluctuations of price through which he has had to live.

ARMY DAY—IT SYMBOLIZES AMERICANISM AND PATRIOTISM

TODAY IS ARMY DAY.

Today we do honor to the defenders of our flag.

There are no days of special patriotism.

There are no days when we should be more patriotic than on other days.

The blessed flag of our country speaks to loyal hearts—TODAY and EVERY DAY!

It directs our minds to the concept of diffused, but protected, liberty, of which the government, ordained by the country's founders, is the purest and best embodiment ever known.

Its ideals are those of honesty and righteousness and just conduct.

It speaks for the happy traditions of united purpose and action which have made us strong throughout the period of our national life and carried us to a greatness that is without parallel.

IT WAVES us forward in the determination to make the nation greater and purer with each generation.

It calls upon us daily to renew our devotion to the principles of independence, liberty and right, for which America is the synonym.

It stands for the democracy of common right—for the AMERICAN SYSTEM OF GOVERNMENT, and no other system of government.

This system of government IS America!

We must tend it with jealous care. We must be conscientiously mindful of our duty as citizens, retracing our steps when we stray from the true way, steadfast in loyalty and watchful in defense—that the flag may constantly take on new lustre.

AMERICA is for Americans!

From whatever racial stock or earlier environment our citizens may come, they must be Americans in heart and purpose—or they are forever aliens.

No man can corrupt our love of country.

No influence can draw us away from the ideals of which our flag is so beautifully emblematic.

No force can divide this nation against itself.

THE DEVOTION to their country, which burns in the breast of true Americans, is thoughtful and profound.

It is dangerous to ignore it. It is stupid to offend it. It is disastrous to defy it.

The flag embodies this devotion.

It expresses the force and irresistible momentum of that great union of hearts that makes us a patriotic people—and bodes so ill for those blatant elements in our population, who repay the tolerance of America with insult and depraved hostility.

Our Export Muddle

Made Worse by Blunders

MUDDLED and inconsistent economic leadership at Washington has been playing into the hands of our competitors in the world markets.

Price-raising manipulation at Washington has been giving Brazil, India, China, Russia and other cotton-raising countries an opportunity to snatch our foreign markets from us.

Once the trade contacts are broken the markets are likely to be lost forever, for such switches in sources of supply entail basic changes in the machinery of foreign cotton textile mills.

New Deal amateurishness has speeded up slow, long-term factors that were gradually reducing our world position as an exporter of raw materials.

In 1890 three-fourths of the world's cotton was produced in the United States. By 1930 the proportion had fallen to 60 per cent.

As a result of blundering by Washington in the plow-up campaign of 1933 and the 40 per cent acreage cut of 1934, production of cotton in the United States in 1933-34 was less than foreign production FOR THE FIRST TIME IN HISTORY.

AMERICAN curtailment has been hailed as a golden opportunity for foreign expansion of cotton acreage.

Secretary Hull and Secretary Wallace have inconsistently advocated lower tariffs, which would be harmful in any circumstances and would prove ruinous in light of the New Deal cost-raising domestic program.

TO BE consistent, the Administration must recognize that foreign buyers are not interested in paying a premium for American farm products because of our internal plan to establish a parity between industry and agriculture.

With radically conflicting views on foreign trade within his own official family, President Roosevelt is seeking simultaneously to ride two horses running in opposite directions.

And, while the politicians blunder, the export trade of the American people is dwindling and in many cases almost disappearing.

Let's get going RIGHT!

An Optimist at 80

Hammond Looks Ahead

At 80 John Hays Hammond, a great American, refuses "to point with pride" to the achievements of his own generation or "to view with alarm" the difficulties of the present day.

In a long and eventful life which has taken him to the far corners of the earth and exposed him to all sorts of dangers and adventures, including a sentence of death, Colonel Hammond has learned that, come what may, "a man must do his work."

If Colonel Hammond and men like him had been deterred by fears and qualms mining resources which have benefited millions and changed the fabric of human life would never have been developed.

If nations allow fear and alarm to paralyze their mental and physical activities progress will be checked.

The Colonel is not thinking of retiring.

Still active, he plans to buy an airplane for his private use.

And he's going trout fishing in the Catskills.

He's a typical American, and America is most alive and successful when it reflects such a spirit as his.

With Lindbergh's Aid

An Exile to Return

From Washington comes the news that the historic Wright airplane, which at Kitty Hawk made the first successful heavier-than-air flight, will be returned from England.

The plane at one time was sheltered in the Smithsonian Institution, and was expected to remain there.

But Orville Wright became involved in a dispute with the officials over the labeling of the craft because—allegedly—too much credit had been given to Samuel Pierpont Langley, another pioneer experimenter.

So the Wright plane was sent to England.

Now, after many years, it is reported that Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh has adjusted the misunderstanding, and the Wright plane will return home.

As a good will ambassador, it seems, Colonel Lindbergh is as successful in America as when he goes abroad.

Lincoln's Neighbor

Fought for Old Glory

Elbridge J. Jones of Milford, N. H., used to live next door to Abraham Lincoln at Springfield, Ill.

Mr. Jones and the girl he met at a levee long ago stepped into the news recently by observing their 63rd wedding anniversary.

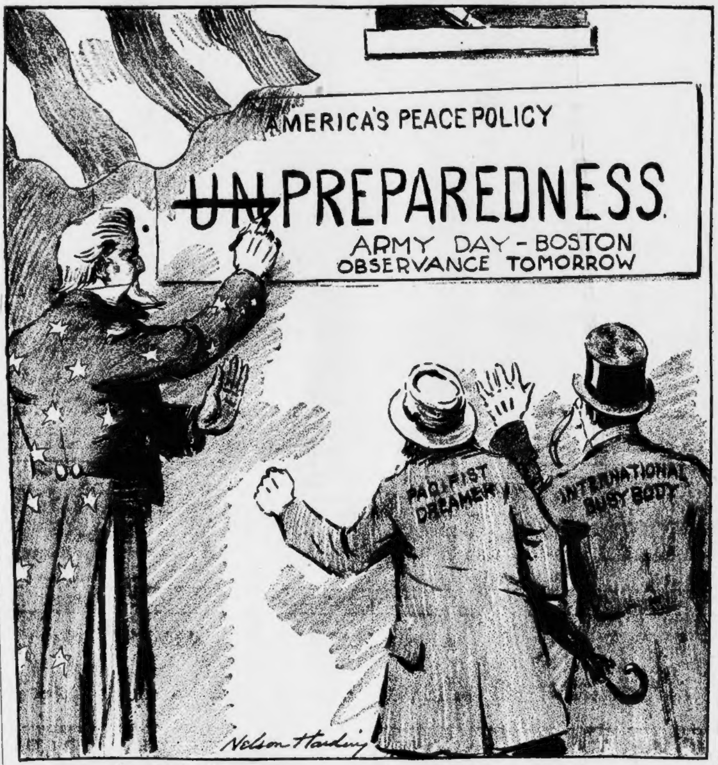
Mr. Jones, last surviving member of the Milford Grand Army of the Republic Post, treasures gifts he received from the martyred Emancipator.

Let us also treasure the gift we received from Abraham Lincoln and the Grand Army of the Republic.

It is the gift of "Union and Liberty, now and forevermore"!

We need to think a lot about this precious gift in these days of "parlor pinks" and Communist agitators.

Uncle Sam Draws the Line



Disregarding the objections,
And the noisy propaganda
Of the altruistic dreamers
And the vapid visionaries.

Uncle Sam is wisely, firmly,
Drawing a black line through letters
That have always caused disastrous,
Loss of life and loss of treasure.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, April 6—Little wonder everybody is signing up to write a newspaper column. It's the jolliest of jobs. And I've tried out scade, from clerking in a hotel to theatrical press-agenting. Not to mention lesser excursions into grocery wagon driving and hash house waiting.

O. O. McIntyre

Arthur Brisbane, I hear, talks his column into a dictaphone in an auto, on trains, aboard ship. Just relaxes, presses a button, mumbles awhile et voila! And who has more fun than Mr. Brisbane? Today in Florida, tomorrow at San Simeon, and the day after lunching at the White House.

Columning always gives one a chance to be autobiographical. To talk about one's self, to exploit personal vagaries and pet the ego until it purrs. All a columnist does is ramble along this way and before he knows it, there's his column and he can romp out to meet a visiting English author.

He is invited to the openings of new bars, new cafes and new supper clubs with all their free drinks and free headaches. He has seats smack behind the critics at first nights, sees the private showings of pictures and has a ringside chair at the fights. The fabled Riley's life is bleak by comparison.

One reaches the columnist trade by various paths. Broun and Pegler were baseball reporters. Lessing was a comic strip editor. Jay House was mayor of Topeka. F. P. A. was an insurance agent, and so on.

I attained the goal by the simple and blundering process of being a failure at everything else. In other words, hit bottom hard enough and you may bound up a full fledged columnist with a cane and everything.

My first column graced the editorial page of a paper in Dayton, O. It was—and was there ever such imaginative ingenuity?—captioned "Just For Fun," pinched out in the brief interludes of editing copy, writing head-lines, making up pages and covering what was called "the City Hall run."

The column ran for four days before the publisher noticed it and whistled up the tube for me. The column was ringed in deep mourning on his desk. "What's the idea of this?" he scowled. "Don't you like it?" I twittered.

He bellowed: "I not only don't like it, I won't have it!" Genius staggered a moment and as I tottered up the stairs he called: "And don't have a lot of your friends writing in how they miss it." The white-haired old mind reader!

Then came the big adventure in New York.

I wrote columns in a West 57th street boarding house room, took them around and waited in ante-rooms for verdicts. During this dreary travail Herb Swope told me: "We have no place for you on the World, but you have something."

So far as I can learn I was first to syndicate a New York column in this century.

Listen, World!

How Do Old People Get That Way?

Every day there are a score of letters on my desk with the same old theme song—"How do old people get that way?"

Elsie Robinson

Usually the letter is from some youngster who has been trying to tell Mom or Dad how things are nowadays—and getting exactly nowhere.

"What makes 'em like that?" says he indignantly. "They won't even try to understand. They just keep saying how things were or what people did 20 or 30 or 40 years ago. And it's no use reminding them that times have changed. They don't even hear you.

"Why is this? Can't they help themselves? Is there something about getting old that makes them like that—so darned unreasonable?"

All of which, I regret to admit, is all too true. And being no 1935 model myself, I also know the answer.

GETTING OLD

How do old people get that way? They get that way because they want to, youngster.

Is there something about Getting Old that makes them like that?

Not that I know of—yet. Nature may put the most eager spirit on the spot at 80 — but there's certainly nothing, up to 50, that compels any human to close up shop.

Obviously, one cannot go in for toe dancing at that age; but one's mind can be as open, one's interest as keen, as a 20—if "Barkis is willing."

But, unfortunately, Barkis is all too seldom willing. For one has learned by that time that there are penalties attached to having an open mind.

An open mind implies certain obligations. You must be willing to face argument, accept challenges and take risks.

CONSEQUENCES

In short, you must face life and other people as recklessly as you faced them when a youngster, regardless of the consequences to your own vanity, laziness or cowardice.

And there are bound to be consequences—unpleasant ones. Enthusiastic people get into messes. Lose money. Are imposed on. Have their privacy invaded.

Inquisitive people who like new experiences and novel ideas are apt to be laughed at or distrusted—particularly by the smugger and more conventional members of society.

Old Age provides the average human with a certain amount of power and position which enable him to Sit Soft if he so desires.

If Papa dislikes argument he can cut off Junior's allowance. If Mama dreads criticism, she can always have a sick headache or burst into tears.

So look out, youngster! For you Old Age is what you yourself make it.

You decide at 20 what you'll be at 60. If you don't want to take the count THEN, don't start ducking wallops NOW.

Eccles on the Job

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

A few weeks ago a conservative New York banker suggested to me that I watch closely the forthcoming examination of Marriner S. Eccles by the House Banking and Currency Committee. Mr. Eccles is Governor of the Federal Reserve Board.

Edwin C. Hill

"He's a Mormon missionary, set up by this administration to tell experienced bankers and financiers what to do," said my friend. "There are two or three members of the committee who really know something about finance, and I understand that they are all primed and loaded for Mr. Eccles. It ought to be a good show."

ECCLES THE WINNER

It was, but not exactly the kind of show the banker had in mind.

Through the eleven days of the committee discussions, Mr. Eccles won every round of the serial argument on money, credit banking practice and financial strategy directed toward recovery.

New Yorkers are pretty insular people.

If my friend the banker had been around a bit and had known a little something about what lies across the Hudson river, he would have identified this slender, keen-faced, reserved "Mormon missionary" as the owner of twenty-seven banks and the head of a great industrial empire reaching through five or six Western states.

"You're telling me!" Mr. Eccles might reply to the practical men who assail him, but you may be sure he will make no such retort. He never indulges in any of the flip-cracks and shopworn aphorisms of the more yappant school of modern statesmanship.

A MODEST MAN

So modest is he that when he was proposed for the post of assistant secretary of the Treasury, even the President was vaguely informed about him. Someone told Mr. Roosevelt that he owned 27 banks and that none had been caught in the crash and that none had been pulled down in the punishing depression years. That was enough. Mr. Eccles moved into the Treasury office.

He is 44 years old, born in Logan, Utah, an alumnus of Brigham Young College of Utah.

In addition to his banks, his interests include construction companies, among them six companies which built Boulder Dam, sugar factories and beet-growing lands, power plants and lighting systems, mining, smelting, canning, irrigation, timber and sawmill enterprises in Utah, Colorado, Idaho, Oregon, Arizona and New Mexico.

Fulfilling the obligation imposed on its college graduates by the Mormon church, he served, after his graduation, as a missionary for the church in Scotland.

Mr. Eccles urges a controlled and modified capitalistic system.

He would use governmental credit, not to compete with individual enterprise, but to encourage it.

Could this quiet, modest, informed and successful banker, talking from experience, as Henry Ford might talk, get a national hearing like that accorded the three musketeers of the recent radio argument?

Laughing Away Wars

By Hendrik Van Loon

Walt Disney and the Peace of the World

It was the year 1814.

Napoleon, having marched his 10 million men up the hill, had marched them down again, or rather, those who could still walk and who had now painfully found their way back to their impoverished homes, there to sit and watch the slow dismemberment of their unfortunate country.

For the allies, after 15 years of continual warfare, were in no mood to show any mercy to the conquered.

They had gathered in Vienna and were awaiting the arrival of the French delegate to inform him of their decisions.

COOKS SAVE FRANCE

He was to listen to what he was told to do, and then he was to sign whatever was put before him, and then return home in a chastened mood to tell his fellow Frenchmen what price they were expected to pay for their short-lived day of glory.

The victim chosen for this most unpleasant job was a certain Monsieur de Talleyrand.

* * *

Within two weeks after his arrival, the French delegate was part of the peace convention. Within six weeks he dominated.

And, if we are to believe the other members, most of Monsieur de Talleyrand's phenomenal success was due to the fact that he gave the best dinners in all Vienna.

When President Wilson went to Paris to settle the fate of the world, he took a boat-load of historical and economic and geographic experts with him, and we are still busy cleaning up the mess.

I do not suggest (a lot of good it would do anyway at this late date!) that he should have taken a ship-load of American cooks, for in those days Paris was still supreme within the field of eating and dining.

But we manufacture a purely American product beloved of all the world. I am referring to the pictorial compositions of the great Maestro Walt Disney.

In the Wilsonian days the idea of Mickey Mouse still lay dormant in his fertile brain. But today that brain is working under full steam.

Why not make Walt Disney America's ambassador extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to all the nations of the world, with the right to break in upon any solemn gathering of diplomats, turn out the light and turn on Mickey Mouse, the Big Bad Wolf, or King Midas, as the occasion might demand?

* * *

This sort of thing has not been done since the court fools went out of existence.

They were a marvelous antidote for the solemn nonsense that will creep in whenever solemn statesmen solemnly debate solemn subjects for days or weeks at a time.

They were a sort of cosmic comic-relief, and their laughter would upset a dozen hopeless deadlocks that today can only lead to war.

* * *

And if this suggestion be not in conflict with any of the laws Congress has passed since early this morning, I would like to suggest that Mr. Disney or one of his most popular children be made an ex-officio member of our Department of State.

Then the next time a conference convenes, the flunkeys will suddenly open the doors of the assembly rooms and announce: "His Excellency Mr. Michael Mouse (Harvard '06), the delegate from the United States of America, and Mrs. Mouse."

The whole conference will thereupon be dissolved into such immediate roars of laughter that the members shall completely forget the business in hand.

For you cannot possibly hate a man when you have laughed with him.

And so they would, between loud guffaws, decide to adjourn sine die. And what, I ask you, could possibly be better for the peace of this world?
